

How a president deals with the senate is told in this, the fourth installment of a senator's actual story of the inside workings of the upper branch of congress. It reveals the great power of the executive over legislation.

CHAPTER IV.
Washington—"The president once said to me—never mind which president—that he wished members of congress would stop asking him to do their thinking for them," said the senator, continuing his inside story of the United States senate.

"I had gone to the white house to get presidential o.k. on a bill in which I was mighty interested. Rather, I had gone to try to convert the president to my bill, for I had learned through the underground channels of cloak-room talk that he was opposed to it and had advised certain senators to vote against it.

"The president was not in the best of humor that day. He was a bit short tempered anyway, and things had not been going just right. While I talked, he kept fuming, and finally he got me so nervous that I stopped. That minute he got up and wagged his fingers at me.

"'Osgood, you fellows,' he said, 'I wish you would stop pestering me this way! I mean, why do you insist that I think for you? Oh, yes, you do—' he waved me aside as he saw I was about to protest—and I can prove it by this very bill you came up to sell me. It is a bad bill, and if you stop to think it out, you would never press it, much less ask me to stop fighting it.'

"Well, then he proceeded to lay my poor little bill out cold, in the most ruthless fashion. As a matter of fact, I did not know much about the bill, except superficially, for I had introduced it after some folks out in my state had sent a man down to Washington to talk me into it. This man had a mass of information, which he freely imparted. I knew him, and knew he was a respectable citizen, and represented respectable folks. So I didn't go behind the facts and figures he presented to me, especially as with-in a few days of his visit, I began getting letters from very influential folks, all of whom I knew to be of the highest standing and probity. They all endorsed the scheme, and urged me to sponsor it.

"Now the whole business didn't amount to much in itself. If the bill had passed and become law, nobody would have been particularly hurt. But the president showed me that it would establish a dangerous precedent, and open the way for persons not so respectable to tap the public treasury under the guise of doing a public service.

"Before I got away, he had me admitting that if I had gone into the matter as he apparently had—for he knew a lot more about this particular project than I did—I would have been against it. I guess some of my colleagues thought I was crazy when I withdrew the bill a day or two later. I know the folks out home who had got me to introduce it never quite got over my action.

"That man talk to the president was good for me as a legislator, and my observations since has led me to conclude it would be good for some more of us in the senate, though I am not going to criticize my colleagues. I am not without sin myself, I will cast no stones."

PHONE SERVICE TO MILWAUKEE IS BACK TO NORMAL

Telephone Company Permanently Restores Big Line Wrecked by Storm

Long distance telephone service in the Fox River valley, between Green Bay and Milwaukee, crippled by the great silent storm of Feb. 22, has been entirely restored. The huge 50 wire toll line between Marinette and Milwaukee was restored permanently between Green Bay and Milwaukee last Monday afternoon and Appleton now has the same service to Milwaukee that it had before the storm.

The main toll line from Stevens Point to Appleton will be permanently restored by next Tuesday, it was announced Saturday morning by J. T. Quinn, superintendent of Appleton district of the Wisconsin Telephone Co. Large crews of men are at work on other lines, restoring them permanently. The first work immediately after the storm was of a temporary nature.

A crew sent here by the Western Electric Co. has been working in the main exchange building here for the last three weeks installing new switchboard equipment that will cost approximately $60,000. This installation probably will be completed in about a day.

Except on a few country lines, most of the phones put out of commission by the storm now are in operation again.

FORMER PAPER MILL MAN HERE IS DEAD IN EAST

William H. H. Stowell, a prominent paper manufacturer in Appleton about 35 or 40 years ago, died suddenly this week at Alhambra, Mass. He had been ill only a few days. He was very well known in the paper industry.

Mr. Stowell founded the Fox River Pulp Co. which erected one of the first ground wood and sulphite mills in Wisconsin on the site of the present powerhouse of the Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat and Power Co. He also was an officer of the Atlas Paper Co., which now is included in the Kimberly-Clark Co.

Sheriff In Flood Stricken District Killed In Battle

Beardstown Official and Two Deputies Shot by Greek Section Hands; Mob Violence Is Feared.

By United Press Leased Wire

Beardstown, Ill.—Mob violence was feared here Saturday following the killing of Sheriff Ed Lashbrook and two of his deputies in a battle with Greek section hands.

One Greek was killed Saturday when a posse under Deputy James Kiley attempted to arrest five foreigners, suspected of complicity in the shooting.

The trouble started when Lashbrook and his deputies attempted to quiet a disturbance in the section hands camp at Frederick, near here on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad.

Thirty of the laborers were taken into custody and are in jail here. The sheriff and deputies Frank Uter and Carl Neff were all killed by revolver fire from a work train. They were popular officials and feeling is running high in Beardstown, where nerves of the populace are already on ragged edge due to three weeks of floods.

On request of Beardstown city authorities, the work train was moved from this city to Frederick recently because of the unsavory reputation of the laborers. The men received their pay Friday and a celebration started, which resulted in a general fight throughout the camp.

An appeal was sent to the sheriff by nearby residents to quell the trouble. As the group of guards approached the train, a volley of shots sounded and Lashbrook and Uter fell dead. Neff died of his wounds within a few hours.

After the shooting, the entire gang made a rush for a train just pulling out of Frederick and rode to Beardstown. There a large posse of hastily sworn in deputies were waiting, and arrested all except eight, who escaped.

The laborers were marched through the streets, waist deep in water, while the guards rowed behind and shot at sides in boats, with leveled shotguns.

SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE SPLIT OVER BONUS BILL

Groups Begin Tussle Next Week to Force Adoption of Own Pet Ideas

By United Press Leased Wire
Washington—Republican members of the senate finance committee Saturday divided into two definite groups over the soldier bonus bill.

As a result two different bills will be thrown into the committee's lap next week and a tussle will begin between the two groups to force adoption of their pet ideas.

The two bills will be:
1. By McCumber, chairman of the committee, providing for the adjusted certificate plan of the house bill with modifications greatly broadening the benefits to service men.

2. By Smoot, Utah, providing a twenty year insurance policy with out any borrowing provisions as a substitute for the house plan.

After the conference of Republican senators today, McCumber ordered a committee of drafting experts to have a bill ready for Monday. This measure is to provide for the certificate plan, but will remove all limitations as to the time within which a former service man can apply for bonus.

McCumber's new plan will give the veterans hitherto unheard of concessions and privileges with respect to borrowing.

Both the Smoot and McCumber bills will eliminate the land reclamation provision of the house bill.

At today's conference no attempt was made to map out a method of financing the bonus.

Committee members said the first task is to get an agreement among themselves on the general plan of the bill. The way things stand now agreement is likely to be considerably delayed, committee members admitted.

MOVE FOR PEACE IN IRELAND FAILS

By United Press Leased Wire
Dublin—Efforts to bring about a peace agreement between the free state and the Irish rebels who demand a republic collapsed Saturday.

Leaders of the free state and the republican organization met for three hours but failed to reach an agreement and the conference was dissolved.

The only thing the delegates could get together on was a resolution expressing horror at the murder of Protestants in Cork.

RADIO CONTROL BILL READY TO BE INTRODUCED

Measure Would Prevent Growth of Any Monopoly in Transmitting Messages

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1922, by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—Plans for government control of radio have been completed. An administration bill will be introduced in the senate next week by Mr. Kellogg of Minnesota and in the House by Mr. White of Maine. Briefly, the bill when passed, would authorize the department of commerce to prevent the growth of any monopoly in transmitting messages of any kind through the air. It would encourage division of the hours of the day among the sending stations.

For many months the radio problem has been growing in complexity. The limited number of wave lengths and the great number of people who have sought to establish transmitting stations has compelled the government to take a hand. Committees of experts representing every kind of business interest and every phase of government equity have been at work on the matter and have finally come to a unanimous conclusion. Their findings will be embodied in the new bill to be introduced in congress.

BROADLY PIRATED
The legislation itself will be broadly phrased so as to give the widest latitude possible to the administrative agency of the government—the department of commerce—but the report which has just been agreed upon by the army, navy, private companies, amateurs and all kinds of concerns interested in radio makes certain recommendations which the department of commerce would be morally bound to follow when the law is enacted.

In the first place, no transmitting station will ever be given a monopoly for a certain city or district. The government believes such a practice would be giving privilege to vested interests. If there are several newspapers in a city or several business houses which want to use the radio for transmission purposes, the government will grant licenses to any of them. But the time for using the transmitting stations will have to be divided equitably among the users. The inspectors of the department of commerce will assist in bringing the

BATTLE RAGES AT GATES OF PEKING

Rival Chinese Leaders Fight for Control of Government of Republic

Peking—Foreigners in Peking Saturday heard the rumble of artillery as the armies of Chang Tso-Lin, the war lord of Manchuria, battled with the forces of General Wu Pei Fu, victor of Honan. Legation guards are ready for action.

The rival Chinese leaders are fighting for control of the Peking government. President Hsu Shih Chang is here with a small garrison, too weak to resist either of the armies which are hammering each other at the city gates. The victor in the battle now raging is expected to advance upon Peking.

The foreign legations here are protected by troops of each nation represented and in event of invasion of the city by either rebel army, those guards will defend the legations just as they did in the boxer uprising. Foreigners in Peking would go behind the legation walls for protection. It is not thought likely, however, that either of the rebel chiefs will antagonize the powers by menacing their legations.

Farwell Is Held ON WITNESS STAND

By United Press Leased Wire
Madison, Wis.—Hartwell Farwell, church trustee of Windsor Wis., was fighting Saturday morning with his back to the wall against the cross examination of prosecution attorneys in his trial for first degree murder for the slaying of Theophilus Hosten, Belgian admiral of his sister.

Farwell admitted that on the night of Jan. 10, when he saw Hosten talking to his sister in the Farwell yard, he rushed from the house, revolver in hand, "without thinking that Alice was in danger, just to drive him away."

Farwell took nearly the entire day Friday on the stand, the last three hours being taken up with cross examination. He took the stand again Saturday and kept it all morning, after the attack of the state attorneys.

Farwell saw no weapon in the hand of the farmhand when he rushed, revolver in hand, from the house, he said.

LAFOLLETTE RESOLUTION IS PASSED BY SENATE

Many Fear They Hold Worthless U.S. Securities

By United Press Leased Wire

Washington—Congress was flooded Saturday with telegrams and letters from persons all over the country who fear they may be holding duplicated government securities. This follows charges by Representative Johnson, South Dakota, Republican that hundreds of millions of dollars worth of United States bonds have been duplicated.

Many congressional secretaries were busy sending replies that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon denies the charges and that people need have no fear as to the value of their liberty bonds.

In all the messages was the demand for an investigation by congress into Johnson's charges.

EXPECT MAY DAY TO PASS WITHOUT "RED" BOMBINGS

Government Officials Taking no Measures to Prevent Demonstrations

By United Press Leased Wire
Washington—The May day anniversary—often bombing time for revolutionists in various parts of the world—has lost its American significance.

Government and labor union chiefs here Saturday declared no extra measures were being taken to prevent demonstration or to stage demonstrations next Monday.

Attorney General Daugherty announced the police force of the nation would not be increased despite the fact that 3,000,000 men are now out of work and two big strikes are on. The justice department looks up on the day "just as any other day" and it is thought no disturbances will develop.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor in an exclusive statement to the United Press, declared the significance of May day had been forced on the American public "as a hoax."

The revolutionists of Europe have jibed the American public to such an extent that it believed May day "means something sinister," he said.

"May day appears on the calendar of the American Federation of Labor just as any other day," Gompers said. "It has no significance even in Europe except with the revolutionist minority."

Orders Increasing
"Sales reports made to us by many fruiting plants show that the volume of business is increasing," says R. S. Powell, president of the First National bank. "Competition is so close, however, that the volume is coming at the expense of prices and profits."

There isn't such a large amount of business to be had, and it therefore seems that firms will take orders on almost any basis to keep their plants operating. I look for the volume to keep growing and believe that by the end of the year these firms will get their business into such shape that they will be making profits again.

FORM ADVERTISING CLUB IN GREEN BAY

Appleton Men Assist in Organization Work—Invited to Come Here Thursday

Between twenty and twenty-five Green Bay businessmen organized an advertising club at a meeting in the Beaumont hotel, Green Bay, attended by five members of the Appleton club, Friday evening. The Green Bay club is to be affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

J. C. Tunison, president of the Appleton club, outlined the purposes of the organization in an address. He also emphasized the advisability of affiliating with the national organization. Work of the vigilance committee of the club, which strives for truthful advertising, was explained by H. L. Post, chairman of the vigilance committee here.

Other Appleton men at the meeting were Ralph Gee, Gerald Galpin and Carleton Sackner.

The Green Bay club accepted an invitation to attend the banquet in honor of Charles H. Mackintosh, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, here next Thursday evening.

BUSINESS IS ON SLOW ROAD TO NORMALCY

Bankers Here Report Big Increase in Number of Orders at Factories

MONEY IS MORE PLENTIFUL
Farmers Are Cheerful in Spite of Severe Blow to Their Profits

Prosperity, which means good business, is slowly but steadily returning to the Fox river valley. The biggest task the last year was to keep gloom and hard times under submission. Improvements probably will be slow the remainder of the year but "normalcy" and conditions resembling those of "before the war" are surely returning.

This is the note of encouragement voiced by Appleton bankers in a review of the business situation. They are emphatic in their statements that conditions are no worse. All see a marked improvement over the situation a year ago and there are distinct gains over the business status of even a month or two past.

More orders are reaching industrial plants and the volume of business is gaining, financial leaders say. Manufacturers are not operating on a basis that spells profit and merchants hardly have emerged from the period of "getting out from under," but the general tone of business is better and it is believed to be only a question of months when markets will become more stable and industry will be in better shape. Banks here are feeling growing and some have ample funds to reduce commercial loans. Farmers are obliged to take low prices for milk and livestock but take the situation good naturedly believing if they can weather the pinch until fall they will realize enough on crops to stabilize their industry.

BOMBING PLANES DEFEAT GUNBOATS

Chinese Fight First Battle in History Between Air and Water Fleets

Shanghai—Bombing planes defeated river gunboats in a battle at Canton, according to dispatches from that city received here Saturday.

Three planes of the Canton government attacked nine warships in the Pearl river when the crews were suspected of being sympathetic with the Peking government.

A direct hit was scored on the river cruiser Hanchi. The bomb killed twenty sailors and wounded thirty and put the vessel out of action. The others surrendered.

This was the first battle in history between air and water fleets. The war vessels were helpless against the aircraft, their guns being useless for high angle fire. As the air fleet pivoted and returned to the attack, surrender signals were hers led by the whole fleet.

These gunboats were the last of the Peking government's navy.

RUSSIANS WILL REJECT FRENCH TERMS AT PARLEY

Bolsheviks to Accept British Terms Acceptable for Negotiations

By United Press Leased Wire
Genoa—Russia will reject the French terms for an agreement with the allies but will consider the British terms acceptable as a basis for negotiations.

This decision was reached by the Russian delegation in a conference which continued until an early hour Saturday morning.

The allies intend to combine and coordinate the French and British terms in one note which will be presented to the Russians before night.

The French terms, it was learned Saturday, provide that if no agreement can be reached on payment of Russian debts, the soviets shall accept the arbitration of a mixed commission appointed either by the chief justice of the United States Supreme court, the Higue tribunal of the league of nations.

The principal difference between the French and British terms is that the French demand complete payment of war debts and return of property seized by the soviets from foreigners, whereas the British are willing to compromise on these points. When the notes are submitted for presentation to Russia they will ask seven categorical questions as to Russia's attitude, so as to prevent further quibbling by the soviets and will then lay down the terms on which the allies propose to give assistance to Russia.

When asked about the French draft, Tchitcherine gravely shook his head.

MANY PERSONS ARE HOMELESS IN BIG FLOOD

Thousands Flee Before Rush of Waters as River Breaks Levee

By United Press Leased Wire

Natchez, Miss.—An inland sea of swirling and onrushing set of flood waters from the Mississippi river Saturday covered more than 3,000 square miles of land in five Louisiana parishes.

Released by a levee break at Ferriday La., the flood waters were sweeping villages and plantation after plantation in its path, forcing thousands of persons to abandon their homes.

Twenty-five thousand people will be homeless by floods in Concordia, Catahoula and Tensas parishes, Louisiana.

Planters, according to estimates made here and at Natchez, will suffer losses ranging from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Rushing through the crevasse in billows with undiminished force, the water has covered the lower places and is steadily rising through the affected areas.

Approximately 25,000 residents of Concordia, Catahoula, Tensas, Franklin and Avoyelles parishes will ultimately be affected, some workers estimated Saturday. More than 10,000 have already abandoned their homes.

One thousand refugees have arrived here and others are arriving on every boat.

Four thousand are quartered at Hattiesburg.

Two thousand others, now quartered at Jonesville will be removed to Hattiesburg because of the steady rise of water at Jonesville. Light foot streams were reported in many streets there.

Five thousand others, who have fled to high land, remain to be rounded up by rescue workers.

SOCIALISTS MEET FOR CONVENTION

National Parley of Party Leaders Opens Saturday in Milwaukee

Meanwhile other leaders of the party, notably Morris Hilquit, New York; Clarence Darrow, Chicago; and Congressman London New York, were lining up delegates for what is expected to be a strenuous fight on the question of party leadership. Some delegates are reported to be opposed to Debs in his struggle to retrieve lead on ship, temporarily relinquished when he was sent to Atlanta prison for war time utterances.

The Order of Railway Conductors and the International Garment Workers meet here Monday. Many delegates already were on hand.

A possible combine of the two labor groups with the socialists in forming the nucleus of a new labor party will be discussed Monday.

Wealthy Man Maintains He Did Not Kill Young Woman Whose Body Was Found in Basement of Parsonage.

(1) Wealthy Man maintains 10 head Hoopston, Ill.—John C. Wyman, wealthy retired farmer and church elder, confessed Saturday he betrayed Gertrude Hanna who was found murdered in the basement of the United Presbyterian parsonage here.

"But I didn't kill her," shouted Wyman. "Before God, I say I didn't."

"We turned him loose with bounds on his track" was the explanation of Charles N. Knox, sheriff of Vermilion county.

GIVEN THIRD DEGREE
The "third degree" was given Wyman throughout the night by Sheriff Knox and John Lewman, state's attorney.

"I met Gertrude," Wyman said, "when we attended church together years ago. We were friends even then."

"But she went to Chicago to live after which I met another woman, who I afterwards married. That was two years ago."

"One Sunday Gertrude came back to Hoopston. I met her at church and we took a long stroll in the country."

I confessed my love to her but she told me to forget it.

WANTED TO MARRY
"I wanted to marry her, but she refused."

"We severed relations. 'That's all I know before God, I repeat, I didn't kill the girl.'"

"You remind me of Tom Tucker who got kicked out of hell for lying," shouted the state's attorney.

Sheriff Knox interrupted: "Grace sister of Gertrude, told me that the dead girl pleaded with you to marry her when she found out about her condition."

"Is that true?" Wyman responded. "Knox jumped up and shouted, 'Well, I didn't kill her!'"

The sheriff entered with Grace and W. T. Hanna, the girl's father. During the intensely dramatic scene which followed Wyman kept his eyes glued on the floor.

ACCI SE ELDER
Grace, a year or two younger than her dead sister, a school teacher and quite attractive pointed an accusing finger at Wyman.

"You did it," she screamed. "After Gertrude pleaded and begged with you to marry her, you, a pillar of the church, refused."

The young school teacher raised her two clenched fists high above her head and cried for the truth.

"Please, if you killed my sister, tell us," she begged. "My mother is dying at home."

Wyman repeated in a droning voice: "Before God, I didn't."

"Didn't Gertrude plead with you for an engagement ring and didn't she threaten to bring you into court to force you to acknowledge the child?" Grace demanded.

"I wanted to marry her," he contradicted.

"Why don't you tell the truth?" pleaded the sheriff. "You know you wronged this family. You brought on this terrible misfortune."

"I am telling the truth, I didn't kill her."

"But you were responsible for her condition?" asked Lewman.

"Yes," and Wyman hung his head. "Come on, spit it out," commanded the sheriff.

"Get right with God," pleaded the father, who is of deep religious convictions.

CALL IT MURDER
The murder, so the death of Gertrude is called by the sheriff and state's attorney, rivals the mystery plots weirdly woven

BUSINESS LOOKS BETTER NOW THAN IN MANY MONTHS

Bankers are Agreed That Trade Conditions are Showing Improvement

What we would consider a normal business until there is a greater degree of equality between prices and the people's income. Costs must be reduced by manufacturers and this must come about largely through reductions in transportation costs. The high freight rates are one of the real obstacles to improvement in conditions.

Mr. Howell finds that business men are not asking as many loans as formerly, nor in as large amounts. The fact that less money is required with which to do business has caused a letup in rediscounting. This relieves the former money shortage and provides a ready money supply for short time loans. Bond issues have been a big help to manufacturers in paying their expenses during the times of money stringency. With the high income taxes of profitable times paid off last year, industries are regaining their complacency much more rapidly.

MONEY IS EASIER

"Business is much better," John J. Sherman, president of the Citizens National bank declares. "Conditions are way ahead of what they were a year ago and I believe 30 days from now they will be much better than now. Manufacturing plants have more orders and seem to be in a much improved condition."

"We are not experiencing the easy money situation that prevails in the east but money for loans is more plentiful than it has been. The wave of an easy supply of money hasn't reached this locality as yet. Corporations still are floating large bond issues and making heavy demands, so we do not have the conditions enjoyed in other some parts of the country. There is a brisk demand for loans, however. Collection also are better."

Mr. Sherman finds that merchants are enjoying a good trade but there has been little gain in volume. Merchants are better off here than in many other cities, however. They

POSTER URGES BUSINESS MEN TO ATTEND CHURCH

An appeal to businessmen to forget their worries on Sunday and attend church is contained in the second of a series of community boosting posters displayed in the chamber of commerce window. The poster pictures a businessman seated at his desk, looking over his hands. The wife and children are departing to the church shown through the window, with its bell ringing out a call to worship.

WINDOW DISPLAY SHOWS SIZE OF TREES IN PARK

An idea of the size of some of the trees in Northern Lakes park is being given Appleton people through display of a cross section of a hemlock tree in the show window of Hughes clothing store. The section is about 2 feet in diameter, with heavy bark. It is believed the tree is about 250 or 300 years old. A campaign will be opened next week to raise funds for purchase of the park for the state of Wisconsin.

were not as hard hit by the depression, as most people have been working steadily.

"Farmers are up against it," said Mr. Sherman, "and have to get along the best they can until fall. Cheese is down to 15 cents and other prices of farm commodities are down. Those who have hogs to sell are helped a little because the hog market is improving. The farmers have little income to tide them over until fall, therefore are borrowing more or less until their crops are harvested."

"Merchants who cut their prices six months or a year ago have found their policy a wise one," says Matt Schuh, assistant cashier of Appleton State bank. "The man who kept his prices up is the one who is having hard sledding now. The merchant who got high-priced goods off his shelves and is selling goods bought on the lower market is making some profit now."

The money demand is big. Mr. Schuh reports, but bankers are exercising extreme care to make no loans for anything that smacks of speculation. Buying is increasing somewhat in the stores. Collections in Appleton are better, he says, but are decidedly slow in other parts of the state. Savings accounts continue to grow.

"There is a better spirit abroad," declares Frank Groh, cashier of Outagamie County bank, "and we are sure to see more and more improvement as we go along. The more prosperous times won't sweep down on us, but there will be a steady advance toward better business. I find factories receiving more orders now than in past months. Collections are slow, but people are saving more money now that taxes and coal bills are paid. Farmers aren't getting the best prices for milk, but there is a good spirit in the country and they are making the best of things until fall."

STUDY PLAN FOR ADVERTISING FOX VALLEY TO WORLD

Chambers of Commerce Keenly Interested in Proposal for Big Campaign

Chambers of commerce of the Fox river valley are considering the plan evolved by a committee of Appleton men to advertise the Fox river valley, according to information received here. It is not likely, however, that any definite action will be taken until a general meeting of all organizations interested in the project is held.

The plan contemplates raising of $50,000 to advertise the valley through newspapers and magazines and by publication of booklets. Each of the four counties in the valley is expected to raise $12,500 to defray the cost.

There is some question, however, whether the plan can be worked this year. It is reported from Fond du Lac that businessmen are keenly interested in the project and are strongly in favor of it but they doubt if Fond du Lac county can raise the required sum of money because of rather depressive business conditions. It is also argued in Fond du Lac that an intensive advertising project without doubt will increase the population of the county and thereby increase the already acute housing shortage. This condition probably would be general all over the valley. In Appleton there is a house shortage but it is believed this will be remedied before the end of this year.

Brown county is engaged in preparing an advertising booklet of its own and does not seem to be greatly disposed to get into the valley venture. Little has been said or done in Green Bay regarding the proposal from Appleton.

STANDARDIZE IF YOU WANT TO MAKE MONEY

"Every business concern, not only the large one but the small one as well, ought to and can standardize if it is engaged in a productive work," said J. R. Shea, industrial engineer of the Western Electric Co. of Chicago, in a talk on "Standardization" before the soldier bonus class of industrial management Friday evening in Appleton Vocational school. The meeting was well attended.

Mr. Shea gave three essentials to standardization which must be followed out: Service, cost and quality. The speaker had sample of products with him with which he showed how savings are made in the production of an article through standardized work. Motion pictures were shown illustrating the standardized production of the desk telephone and also how the idea can be applied to some extent to building.

BEGIN EXCAVATING FOR NEW BUILDING MONDAY

Excavating for the new Wichmann Furniture Co. building on College ave. will be commenced Monday or Tuesday morning. The old frame building has been dismantled and the material hauled away. A steam shovel will do the excavating. The new store will have a frontage of practically 60 feet and will be 120 feet deep.

HUNDREDS OF PIGS SOLD AT MONTHLY STOCK FAIR

The largest number of young pigs in the history of the fair grounds changed hands Saturday. Buyers were present from northern Michigan and southern Wisconsin and had no trouble in filling their double decked motor trucks. Prices ranged from $5 to $8, according to age. Most of the young porkers were brought to Appleton in automobiles.

Freight is Increasing
W. B. Basing, local agent of the Northwestern Railway Co., said Friday the amount of forwarding freight has greatly increased within last few weeks, but that the incoming freight is about holding its own. The principal falling off has been in pulpwood, the shipments of which are falling behind those of last year.

Mrs. D. S. Clow and nephew, Gordon Herman, are spending the weekend in Milwaukee.

H. C. Harvey returned Wednesday to Milwaukee after transacting business in this city.

MACKINTOSH HAS MESSAGE TO GIVE LOCAL RETAILERS

Advertising Club President Has Background of Many Years of Experience

Charles Henry Mackintosh, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the world, is an advocate of truth in advertising. When he comes to Appleton on the evening of May 4 under the direction of the Appleton Advertising club, he will spend considerable time in telling business men and women how to make truth attractive in their advertisements.

The speaker, who has visited most of the advertising clubs in the United States since his election as president, will demonstrate that truthful advertising pays. He will show that while a deceptive statement may bring immediate business, it will never bring satisfied steady customers. He will tell of the educational work of the advertising clubs which not only are trying to make advertising more helpful to the people as well as profitable to the retailer but also trying to teach salespeople to serve their customers better.

Mr. Mackintosh is a forceful speaker who has back of him the experience of a successful advertising and sales executive. He is advertising and sales manager of LaSalle Extension university, Chicago. He left his business when he was elected to the presidency of the advertising association and set as his goal, a visit to the 220 advertising clubs in North America. His tour is not compensated, but merely a volunteer contribution on his own part.

Reservations for the supper and address may be made at either Schlitz Brothers or Downer's Pharmacy. All men and women interested are urged by the Appleton Advertising club to attend. The speaker has a message for every business man and woman who desires to see his service bettered.

THE STAGE

Last Performances

Tonight will mark the final performances of D. W. Griffith's cinema masterpiece "Way Down East" at Fischer's Appleton where it has broken all records for attendance. Appleton and surrounding towns have been unanimous in their endorsement of the famous picture and the local engagement has been a success in all that the terms implies.

A story that is replete with laughs and more serious moments, a cast that eclipses anything ever offered in even a Griffith picture, a stirring climax that reaches heights never before attempted before the camera, all unite in putting the picture over to a big success with Lillian Gish, Richard Barthelmess, Lowell Sherman, Burr Macintosh, Kala Bruce all the way down the line there are names that stand for the utmost and they have never had better opportunity than in this picture. The climax with its river of floating and breaking ice and the rescue work an audience up to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

There will be two performances tonight starting promptly at 6:45 and 8:45 with Amodeo, the acrobat, appearing at each showing.

Tomorrow will bring the customary six acts of vaudeville, three performances during the day.

WORKS 20 YEARS ON CANE HARVESTER

Hammond, La.—Twenty years of experimentation and the expenditure of more than half a million dollars have brought forth a mechanical cane harvester which is expected to have far reaching effect on the sugar business.

The inventor is George D. Luce of Hammond, a veteran of the Civil War, who has lived in the south since being mustered out of the service.

Luce became interested in the harvesting of cane. Research showed him that there had been no advancement in the industry for hundreds of years.

So he sold him moss business in New Orleans and made model after model of a cane harvester. As mistakes were discovered he would correct them.

Recently he perfected a machine which experts say is just what the cane business has been waiting for for 2000 years. The machine cuts the cane at the last ripe joint, strips the leaves and tops the stalks.

A carrier device dumps the stalks in bundles or unloads them in a wagon.

The new harvester is now being manufactured and will shortly be on the market.

VALLEY PYTHIANS TO FORM SOCIETY

Officers and past officers of Knights of Pythian organizations in the Fox River Valley will meet in Neenah on Wednesday evening to form an organization similar to the association of chancellor commanders and keepers of records and seals in Milwaukee. An effort is being made to expand this association to include the entire state. Practically every K. P. lodge in the valley will be represented. P. J. Peterson of Milwaukee, formerly of Neenah, will have charge of the meeting.

RACINE COLLEGE KEEPS PROPERTY

That Racine college has not forfeited its right to the property occupied by the institution until 1919 was the decision of Judge Geiger in the suit brought against the college by Julia Wright Heath and other heirs of Charles S. Wright to recover the property. The decision held that the college had ceased to operate only temporarily for lack of funds and patronage and that the buildings were not being used for any other purpose.

Many Appleton people were familiar with Racine college when Dr. Talbot Rogers was in charge. According to Mr. Wright's will, the property, which is valued at more than $100,000, should revert back to himself or his heirs should it cease to be used for educational purposes. The heirs claimed that the institution has been abandoned. The decision of Judge Geiger settled the dispute.

CONDEMNATION ACTION STARTED TO OPEN STREET

Judge Edgar V. Werner will return to Appleton to reconvene circuit court Monday. Condemnation proceedings will be brought by the city of Appleton against the property owners of the Fourth ward to open Jackson-st. as far as the city limits. The jury that will try the case has already been drawn and proceedings will begin at 2 o'clock.

ROADS IN FAIRLY GOOD CONDITION FOR CAR TRAVEL

Ruts Are Deep and Hard But Most of the Highways Now Are Dry

Condition of Outagamie-co. roads has so improved in the last 10 days that one can get through almost anywhere, it is reported by people who have been traveling these roads considerably.

Though it was quite common for motorists to become mired in the mud a little more than a week ago, the soft places have now almost entirely disappeared, local garagemen, rural mail carriers and delegates to the service census conference held here Wednesday declared.

The frost is practically out of the ground in most places and roads have settled down to a hard bottom. The only fault that is still found is that a number of roads are quite rough. The roads are hard and the ruts deep and getting out of them is sometimes no easy matter, the travelers say.

Route 15 to Milwaukee is in fairly good shape, a garage owner stated. In some localities patrolmen had graded the roads more than three weeks ago.

Boys Already Register For Summer Camps

Summer camp fever is taking hold of the boys in Appleton and many inquiries are reaching Joseph B. Dennison, boys' work secretary of the Y. M. C. A., concerning outing opportunities.

Mr. Dennison already has eight registrations for the Y. M. C. A. cherry picking camp at Sturgeon Bay, and thirteen for the state Y. M. C. A. camp for boys at Manitowish.

Particulars concerning cherry picking camps will be in the hands of the secretary in a few days. The cherry trees were not injured by the snow storms which hit this locality in February and an increase of 25 per cent in the cherry crop is predicted. Appleton will send 144 boys this year.

DESIGNATE DAY TO VISIT DISABLED MEN

In commemoration of the birthday anniversary of Florence Nightingale, May 12 is being observed by the United States Veterans bureau as National Hospital day, when the people of the country may visit the 30,879 disabled ex-service men and women who are receiving hospital treatment at the direction of the bureau. There are none of the war veterans at St. Elizabeth hospital at this time, since Appleton service cases which entail long treatment are sent directly to government hospitals since Jan. 1, 1922.

SWINDLERS MULCT BUSINESSMEN HERE

Men Collecting for "National Guard" Peeved When Asked for Credentials

Several generous manufacturers are just commencing to realize they were fleeced out of from $25 to $50 each last week by two young men who claimed they were collecting funds for the national guard. One claimed to be from Milwaukee and the other from Green Bay. Both wore civilian clothes.

The strangers claimed the state did not furnish sufficient funds and they were endeavoring to make up the deficiency. One of the manufacturers before making a subscription questioned them thoroughly and asked for credentials. All they were able to show them was a letter from the Green Bay chamber of commerce, dated 1920.

He inquired if they had a letter from Appleton chamber of commerce and they informed him they had not applied for one and did not think it necessary. They showed indignation at being questioned.

"You can depend upon it that anyone collecting for the national guard has no authority to do so," said Major C. A. Green and his statement was corroborated by Col. H. E. Pomeroy.

CURB PUMPS HERE IN GOOD CONDITION

Joseph Hodgkins, city sealer of weights and measures, has been busy for the last two days testing and sealing curb and garage gasoline pumps. The pumps are tested twice a year but sealed only once.

At present there are 51 pumps throughout the city, 12 more than when the test was made last fall. Nearly half a dozen more are to be put in this spring. Many of the curb pumps are located on the outskirts of the city and are operated in connection with stores.

As a whole the city official found the pumps very accurate. He came upon one out of commission on which he placed a red seal and three others that were off a shade, but their general condition showed a vast improvement over last year.

FISH ARE CAUGHT IN FLUMES OF VALLEY MILLS

Employees of the various mills are having great sport raking fish out of the racks and incidentally providing themselves with food. The flume that is yielding the greatest supply is that of the Appleton Manufacturing Co., where hundreds of pounds are captured during the early morning hours. The pressure is so great that when the fish come in contact with the rack they cannot get away and are easily captured with rakes.

ONLY ONE WAY TO TURN

"I sometimes wonder," said President Harding at the birthplace of General Grant, "if the magnanimity of Grant, dogged, persistent, unalterable Grant in warfare—the unconditional surrender Grant—would not be helpful in the world today. The great world struggle, which we might reasonably designate the Civil war of western civilization, and in which we so creditably and helpfully participated, left peoples and nations prostrate, hardly knowing which way to turn for restoration."

All very well put, and true with one exception. It was not, as the president said, that the nations left prostrate by the war did not know which way to turn, for the fact is that they turned to America for helplessness in peace as they had turned to her for aid in time of conflict. America responded in the appeal to save Europe from the devastation of a war-erased autocracy, but America did not respond to the appeal to help Europe to its feet from the blow that had left it prostrate.

"I wish America were here," said Lloyd George at Genoa almost at the time Harding was speaking at Point Pleasant, Ohio. "Some people think we want the United States for some selfish purpose. This is not true. We want America because she exercises a peculiar authority. Her very aloofness gives her the right to speak. America could exercise an influence that no other country could command. She could come here free and disentangled, and with the prestige which comes from an independent position she would come with the voice of peace. But America is not here: so Europe must do her best to solve the problems in her own way."

Doubtless wisely, certainly consistently, America is not at Genoa. But back of this is the fact that the conditions which made it imprudent for America to go to Genoa had their origin in America's failure and refusal to make a common peace with the allies at Paris, as well as her refusal to take her place in the League of Nations. There might have been a Genoa conference, but it would have been economic and not political, and it would have been held long before this. Americans did not attribute selfish motives to Great Britain, France or Japan at the Arms conference. It was a gathering notable for unselfish willingness to accommodate differences and to promote the solid aims of peace. We do not see why Americans should attribute to Great Britain and France selfish or sinister aims in their desire, even in their appeal, for assistance from this country in the great work of restoration and peace. It seems to us that the generosity of both Lincoln and Grant toward the suffering and unfortunate is a precedent that America of today cannot ignore, all the more emphatically when it has to do with nations with whom we made common cause in a common ordeal.

There is only one direction in which Europe can turn, and that is toward America. Eventually America will have to respond. Eventually America will have to take up the threads that were broken at Washington by Mr. Lodge and his little band of political haters. Eventually America will come back to that starting place from which she departed at Versailles. There can be no other course if she is to preserve her national self-respect and discharge her obligations to the Christian world.

A TREMENDOUS PROBLEM

When Appleton's present high school building was planned about 18 years ago it was believed that it was large enough to take care of the city's educational needs for a great many years. In fact there are people now living in Appleton who believed it was a mistake to erect so large a building because it would be years and years before it would be filled. The rapid increase in demand for higher education, however, long ago overtaken the school and now Appleton again is facing the problem of enlarging its educational facilities.

The board of education and the school committee of the common council has this background of experience to guide it in finding a way out of the city's difficulties. To do its work well it must have a vision of the future. Building for present needs is only a temporary expedient—a detour on the highway of progress.

To look into the future is not an easy task. It requires vision and imagination. The trouble with most of us is that our foresight is poorly developed because we place too many restrictions on our imaginations. Careful study of what has transpired in the past may provide an inkling of what may happen in the future, but ever changing conditions, which cannot be foreseen, make forecasting extremely hazardous.

City and school authorities need all the expert assistance available in finding a solution for their problem. Whatever decision they make concerns not only every person now living in Appleton but those who live here fifteen, twenty and thirty years from now.

Fathers and mothers of Appleton should not be content to "let Google do it" in this school matter. It is a problem worthy of the careful consideration of every person who has any regard for the growing generations. Taxpayers should seize every opportunity they have of obtaining information so when they are called upon to authorize a bond issue for construction of schools they will go to the polls with a thorough understanding of what is to be done and the steps which were taken to arrive at the conclusion.

YES, WE NEED A MERCHANT MARINE

You must have noticed that a rate war is in progress between the Lamport and Holt Steamship company, a British concern, and the United States Shipping board. So far decreases in rates apply only to South American ports, but it is almost a certainty that the war will extend to ports in all parts of the world.

Here is a convincing example of the necessity of having a merchant marine. If the United States Shipping board had no steamships, or there were no strong American-owned mercantile marine, the British company could establish low rates between the British and foreign ports and exclude American business from international trade. Chairman Lasker must stay in the fight, no matter what the cost. And American commercial and agricultural interests must back him up.

The world is becoming smaller every day and business is growing bigger. The whole world is our trade territory in these times. If the United States is to get all the international trade, both exports and imports, that it is entitled to, we must provide banking facilities at the principal trade marts and run ships to haul our freight and protect our interests.

Civilization

There are now 115,000 miles of paved or surfaced highways in the United States—more than there are or ever were in any other country in the world. They have all been built, too, within comparatively few years. When the system provided for in the federal highway act is completed, the agricultural department reports, the improved mileage will amount to 180,000 miles.

The process will keep right on, with accelerating speed, establishing new trunk lines across the continent and up and down, in a transportation system of ever-growing fineness and durability. Imagine all this network of good roads swept away—the condition in which it would leave the country and the inevitable deterioration that would follow.

Good roads are civilization. There has never been a high state of civilization without dependable transportation routes connecting every locality with every other, and still less will there ever be hereafter. You can measure modern human progress pretty accurately by its road-building.—BRATTLEBORO, VT., REFORMER, (Ind.)

TRY A DRY WASH

The cleansing efficiency of a body wash is by no means dependent on the noise of the splash, nor is the quantity of water used a determining factor, for a fellow who contents himself with a teakettle reservation may come forth quite as clean as the plutocrat who demands the exclusive temporary use of a large portion of the ocean.

Cleaning customs have changed with the process of the sun. Mother keeps the house fairly habitually today with her vacuum equipment without seriously discommoding the family or disrupting domestic bliss—a strong contrast with the prodigious upheaval granddame used to stage in the dread spring housecleaning. It is the modern principle to clean clean and likewise quiet, unadverbially speaking. We're cleaner now than we ever were before and yet we make less fuss about it. Cleanliness has ceased to be merely a virtue and become a right. Occupation, environment and habit have much to do with personal cleanliness in the ordinary sense. A coal heaver or a harvest hand acquires enough ordinary dirt to warrant a wet wash every work day. A school teacher or dry goods salesman scarcely needs a body wash oftener than once a week.

But personal cleanliness in the hygienic sense is a different matter altogether. It refers not to dust and grime and smudges acquired from external sources, but to the body's own secretions, and to the waste in the way of hygienic personal cleanliness is clothing. All pretense of immaculate cleanliness of the body is absurd if the idea does not encompass a complete fresh supply of raiment for each day—and only the most lavish extravagance would insure any such provision.

The natural secretion or excretion of the skin, the sebum or oil and the sweat, would be naturally and hygienically disposed of by evaporation oxidation and attrition in the wearing of clothing. But clothing interferes with all three natural processes of disposal and the more clothing we wear at any time the dirtier we are, irrespective of our bathing habits.

So I suggest that you try a dry wash instead of a wet wash for that dirty feeling. But this I mean take the air, even for just a few minutes a day, garbed as nature. A good time for an air bath is just before you go to bed, or in the morning, or when you are taking your daily exercise. And while you are averse to exercise, or too darned lazy and averse to exercise, take the air anyway. A rubbing of the body with a rough towel is refreshing, the unfortunately it involves a little exercise. The skin takes kindly to air bathing and always resents the soap and water treatment. Our human integument is not the only delicate fabric which is conserved by dry cleansing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

We Strike to Please

You certainly have endeavored yourself to the younger generation of our town. It's "Dr. Brady says this and that," "Dr. Brady ought to know, and he says so," and so on every side and on all occasions. If mother cautions daughter against wearing skimpy skirts on cold raw days or shudders at daughter's temerity in braving the wintry blasts in flimsy athletic underwear and sheer stockings, daughter reassures mother with a quotation from Dr. Brady. I hope it is all right. We parents have confidence in you too. But with the young people you are indeed "in good."—(F. J. T.)

Answer—A, but on the other hand, I am in bad luck and sorely vexed, with these high school with the young ones that bob their hair, use rouge, children who play college man by engaging in football, and emulate the athlete of the fake magazines by smoking cigarettes. I am glad to stand by the girl with a bit of brains who wants to get her feet wet or leave off her winterweights or take a bath or go in swimming now and then without consulting the gossip about the wisdom and safety of the adventure.

A Stickler

Is bad eyesight inherited? Would you advise a young man 26 years of age who is a little near-sighted to marry a girl aged 19 years who is also near-sighted and whose eyes become painful and bring on headache if she tries to read without proper glasses? Would children inherit the weak eyes?—(C. D.)

Answer—The shape of the head is concerned in many instances, as in the Peconic race with the characteristic long skull, the negro and Indian races are short-skulled. Near-sightedness is rare in these races. My inexpert notion is that with two near-sighted parents some of the children would be near-sighted and some would have normal eyes. The oculist who knows the conditions in the cases under question could give you a more definite opinion.

Friend Hub Needs a Bran Mash

Please give your famous recipe for bran mash. My husband has much difficulty regulating his bowels and is very irritable when they are obstinate.—(Mrs. S. A. D.)

Answer—One egg well beaten; pinch of salt; butter size of walnut, melted; one cupful each of sweet milk, wheat flour and wheat bran; 1 teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in gem tins. The first time P. H. emits a growl, bran him in the teeth with one of these and I'll warrant a wee wan smile will brighten his map when he comes to.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Saturday, May 1, 1897

A. A. Babcock was in Green Bay on business. Mrs. G. D. Rowell returned from a visit with Shawano relatives.

Mrs. W. W. Ormsbee of Kaukauna called on Appleton friends. Frank Perry, pulpwood contractor of the "Soo," was calling on paper manufacturers of Fox river valley.

The gross postoffice receipts for April were $1,419, which was $273 greater than those of the same month the previous year.

Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinion

THE "STORMY PETREL" RETURNS

Probably no subject editorially discussed in the history of the nation has resulted in such a divergence of views as has followed the reporting to the Senate by the Finance Committee of the amended Fordney Tariff Bill. In its reported shape it apparently satisfied nobody. Democrats denounced it. Republicans questioned the general principles made by the Senate from the House bill. And the independent press accepted the report more as a subject to talk about than anything else. It seemed to be accepted that changes would be made and that, until they actually had been framed, it was just as well to wait patiently and not construct or announce too positive an opinion.

"The possibilities for political blackmail are practically unlimited," in the opinion of the New York Evening WORLD (Dem.) which sees suggestions of Presidential power to fix rates as a "club for rewarding the faithful and the generous." The motive compelling the committee in framing it, the New York TIMES (Ind. Dem.) is convinced, is "force of habit," which causes the Baltimore SUN (Dem.) to assert that "its purpose is to raise prices in the interest of certain classes at the expense of others."

It must be remembered, however, the WASHINGTON POST (Ind. Rep.) points out, that this "is the first legislation of its kind in America since the war changed the economic relations of this country with all other nations," and that this is "legislation which will test the highest powers of the lawmakers."

There is latent statesmanship in the Senate, now is its opportunity," and the WASHINGTON STAR (Ind.) points out that the report of the committee claiming that it has tried to benefit all sections which "policy would seem to make the bill an all-American bill, attracting support from the North and South, East and West." The STAR accepts the certainty of opposition but believes that the coming debate promises to be along less partisan lines than ever before and directed more to the material effects upon business and industry. Which sentiment likewise is endorsed by the Springfield, Mass. UNION (Rep.), in calling attention to the fact that on tariffs have never been made in more difficult circumstances and the practical effect of any revision "will ultimately come out of Congress must be more or less problematical so long as economic conditions in Europe are so uncertain."

That the majority explanation "of our business depression has at least the merit of novelty," is stressed by the New York Evening POST (Ind.), which, however, believes that if the Senate has its way "the tariff will make trouble for the consumer while for the Republican Congressmen it will be a source of satisfaction." In the meantime it is going to make trouble for the Republican Congressmen. In the meantime it is going to make trouble for the Republican Congressmen.

It is foolish to think, as they do in Holland, that the mark will not fall much more. "The fall is unlimited. Everybody believes in a prompt and ulterior fall of the mark."

"The first result of mistrust in the mark is a greater activity in commercial affairs. Those who have money buy, and as there are many who have a lot of money a great deal is bought. The fall of the mark has made it a mistake to economize and great wisdom to buy."

and enriches special interests." The whole situation requires careful handling in the opinion of the Oakland, Calif. TRIBUNE (Ind. Rep.) which suggests that the "guiding principle for a tariff schedule should be essential protection for American industry, which also means the American workman; but no higher than is required for protection—certainly not so high as to work to the advantage of the profiteers. Beyond the line of necessary protection the consumer is to be considered first."

GERMAN MONEY ALMOST WORTHLESS

Rotterdam.—Discussing the failure of the German authorities to stabilize German marks the NEUE ROTTERDAMSCHER COURANT says:—

"There is no more force of resistance in German money and the desire and the courage to save it have disappeared. German exchange is following the way of the Austrian crown and the Germans regard it as inevitable fate. A few weeks ago I was reading in one of the most important stock exchange papers that the exchange on that day was good; the bonds and the foreign stock had been firm. The exchange would not have been called good if the mark had risen. But heaven had spared voluntary and involuntary speculators this annoyance."

"This idea is very natural. What has been happening for years and for a large number of the population in Vienna, is happening now in Germany on a larger scale. People are living on the fall of the national exchange. Each fall of the mark means an increase in the value of all securities and reserves. Thus everybody who has the means to do so is obliged to ensure himself against increased prices by means of speculation on the exchange. The transactions, or numbers of an exchange, are involuntary speculations, for the value of their goods can fall or rise 50% in one week. For the time being everything is on the rise and fortunes are being made... in paper marks."

"But for big and serious enterprises this situation is impossible. Anybody who wants to keep his engagements is only able to make contracts on short terms. If it is a question of large contracts, such as the delivery of industrial installations, or numbers of motor cars or engines the inconvenience is very great. Contracts in dollars, which in such cases come first, cannot be guaranteed."

"All the same, lots of people don't trouble about it. People are optimistic, that is to say, they are convinced that the present state of affairs will still last for some time. Everybody believes in a prompt and ulterior fall of the mark."

"It is foolish to think, as they do in Holland, that the mark will not fall much more. 'The fall is unlimited. Everybody believes in a prompt and ulterior fall of the mark.'"

"The first result of mistrust in the mark is a greater activity in commercial affairs. Those who have money buy, and as there are many who have a lot of money a great deal is bought. The fall of the mark has made it a mistake to economize and great wisdom to buy."

BUSY GERMANY

London.—The Leipzig correspondent of the Daily Mail says the official opening of the famous annual March Sample Fair took place a few days ago. Business men from all parts of the world—the American contingent was expected to total over 500—have arrived, and the number of exhibitors exceeds 13,000.

It is expected that 120,000 buyers will place orders which will keep German factories occupied for months. All imaginable varieties of goods are exhibited—hardware and leather goods, cutlery, talking machines, fans, furs, grand pianos, and jewelry.

In the technical and building fair, which is being held simultaneously, Krupp, the General Electric Company, the Union of Germany Manufacturers, and the vast Siemens concerns, have arranged imposing exhibitions, which can be seen by the visitor. The German industry is likely to continue a dangerous competitor in the struggle for world markets.

The stand of the South African Union government will attract widespread attention.

University students are acting as guides and interpreters to British and American visitors, and Shakespeare and Shaw are among the dramatists whose works will be produced at the local theatres.

STAMPEDE OF POETS

London.—According to the Daily Express, a thrilling stampede of poets has begun in West Ham.

It has long been believed in this famous borough, just on the outskirts of London, that poets are a natural product of the soil, and that budding Homers and Miltons grow in every street. Why not put it to the test?

The education committee determined to do so, and the poets of West Ham are already justifying the legend. They are turning out poetry by the yard, and rushing to hand it in. The prize is free printing for the best poem.

There are 300,000 persons living in West Ham—and everyone of them a potential poet. It is fervently hoped that a real genius will be discovered.

"We are offering no money prize, but the winning poem will be published in an educational handbook. 10,000 copies of which will be printed," said Mr. W. R. Hughes, of West Ham, to a "Daily Express" representative last night.

Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch has consented to pass judgment on the poets of West Ham.

Fight Mosquitoes

By Dr. R. H. Bishop

A mosquito bite is a trivial thing. We are all bitten by mosquitoes hundreds of times during the summer. A bite doesn't bother much, though it itches severely for a few minutes. But if left alone will cease to trouble after a short time.

But did you ever stop to realize that every time you are bitten you take the chance of being infected with malaria?

Malaria is spread only by the mosquito. Eliminate mosquitoes and you get rid of malaria.

Few of the troubles called malaria by most people are really of malarial origin. They are usually due to the most part to bad digestion, or bad elimination through skin, kidneys or bowels.

Malaria itself is due to an invasion of the blood by a tiny germ more complex than the bacteria which cause most of our infectious diseases.

It goes through several stages of development something like those of a frog or butterfly. It is an organism which cannot live and multiply in the human blood alone, but must spend some of its existence outside the human body.

While in the blood it lives within the corpuscles themselves. At a certain stage, it frees itself and swims about in the blood. When this occurs, the patient has fever and chills with all the symptoms of true malaria.

Now comes along a mosquito and bites the person stricken with malaria. It sucks up some of the blood.

The malaria germ then enters the mosquito and lives the rest of its life.

In changing its home from the human body to that of a mosquito it changes also in form, becoming what we might call the larva or offspring of the original germ.

When this germ matures sufficiently it wanders through the tissues of the mosquito to the salivary glands and when the insect pushes its proboscis through the skin of a human body, the organism passes easily into the fluids of the individual bitten.

And thus malaria is spread, always in an endless chain, from human being to mosquito and from mosquito back to human being again. Quinine is the specific remedy for the disease for it kills the germ in the human blood. Besides quinine, of course, a general and sensible means of treatment must be used such as proper diet, proper cleansing of the skin, and proper evacuation of the bowels.

So far as the family is concerned, the treatment of the disease is not so much the giving of quinine, but that should be directed by the physician, but the prevention of spread of the disease.

Mosquitoes should not be allowed to bite the patient, because in this way they get material to infect other people. Every person with malaria should be screened off and otherwise protected from the insects.

Many Stunts At Novelty Dance Party

Phi Kappa Alpha Fraternity
Party is Replete With Novel Features

Time went rapidly with many clocks wrist watches and regular "tupnips" at the novelty dancing party given by Phi Kappa Alpha fraternity for alumni and friends in Elk hall Friday evening. The favors of the evening were small clocks with the fraternity crest on them. The programs also were patterned after a clock and the dances of the evening signified by the 12 hours. One of the favor dances also followed the time idea with toy wrist watches for the girls and large sized toy watches for the men. The girls and men formed in two lines and danced with the partner opposite.

Just before one dance, the orchestra leader received a number of telegrams for the men. In each envelope was a message telling him with which girl he was to dance and also some joke about her or some characteristic which she possessed. The information made conversation easy. In another dance, the men rolled pieces of serpentine across the floor and each girl picked up an end and followed the paper string to her partner.

A shower of rose petals confetti fell on the dancers at other time when more than a bushel of the petals were allowed to drift down through the air shaft in the center of the ceiling. There were many other novelties. Steve Horton's orchestra, of the Thompson orchestras of Madison furnished the music. There were more than 44 couples present. Mr. and Mrs. George Wettengel and Dr. E. P. Mielke were the chaperones.

Alumni members who attended the dance were Lloyd Young, Brandon, Earl Kromer, John A. Walsh, Manawa, Lawrence Balza, Green Bay; Verne Ames, Appleton; Clinton Van Ostrand, Phillips; Earl McCourt, Wisconsin Rapids and George Corrivau, Berlin.

ALTERATIONS IN CHURCH BASEMENT FINISHED BY MAY 7

All Saints Church to Make Extensive Use of Rooms
in Basement

Plans for the completion of the basement of All Saints church which were tentatively made when the building was erected are being carried out now and probably will be completed by May 7 when Bishop R. H. Weller comes to confirm a class. The alterations made it necessary to excavate under the part of the church which was not dug out in order that a large assembly hall, which measures 75 by 31 feet, might be made.

A kitchen opens off the west side of the assembly hall with sliding windows which will make serving meals convenient. The kitchen will be equipped for serving church and guild dinners. North of the assembly hall, is a clubroom in which pool tables will be placed. This room is about 30 by 30 feet. An open fire place at the east side of the clubroom will make it a place to which the members of the church will be glad to go. The necessary lavatories and rest rooms have also been installed and some changes have been made in the boiler room. Two small rooms are also included in the plan, one which may be used for a check and cloak room and the other for storage.

The Rev. Paul O. Keicher, with a building committee, has had charge of the alterations. Many other small improvements have been made in and around the church itself. The new arrangements will make it easier to have all the church entertainments and functions in the assembly hall instead of in various places in the city.

Lace and Embroidery Week

Beginning Monday,
May 1st.
Ending Saturday,
May 6th.

So important has Lace and Embroidery become in the apparel circles that this occasion is a National affair. The finest products of manufacturers are represented in such extensive assortments that you will find it an advantage to definitely plan to choose Laces and Embroideries for all needs from these special displays.

Filet Laces

Genuine Filet presents some of Lace and Embroidery Week's most attractive values. There are several unusual patterns and both lace and insertion comes in varying widths. Strip collars, cuffs and vestees of Filet almost make themselves and are very smart with a tailor. Prices 75c and $1.35 a yard.
9 inch Filet Band for bedspreads at 45c a yard.
5 inch Filet Lace to match at 29c a yard.
Filet Laces, 4 inch wide for trimming lingerie at 6c a yard.
2 inch Linen Lace and Insertions to match for dresser scarfs and dollies at 25c a yard.

Val. Laces

The very useful members of the Lace family are the Valenciennes; strong, durable, yet fine and attractive, fit for a hundred uses and always handy to have in the sewing basket.
Plat Val. Insertion for underwear, 2 inches wide, a yard 12c.
Plat. Val. Lace to match, 2-4 inches wide, a yard 12c to 19c.
Plat. Val. Lace to match, 2 inches yard 25c.
Plat Val. Lace to match .2 inches wide, a yard 25c.

Special Dyed Laces

Very fashionable for the Spring dancing frock is the black lace or in dyed colors of navy and brown. The Spanish influence still lingers and the home designer may very easily fashion a fascinating draped frock of these wide flouncings or all over patterns offered in complete assortment.

36 inch Spanish Flouncing in black, navy and brown, $3.25 and $3.75 a yard.

Spanish Flouncing in white for Brides and evening wear at $3.50 and $3.75 a yard.

36 inch White and Ecru Allover Lace for waists at $3.00 a yard.

Irish Edgings

Richest looking of the Laces and having recently found new favor with smartly costumed women are the Irish Crochets. To dress up the hand-made, drawn work blouse, to trim very sheer batiste lingerie, a touch on ones frocks, is a luxury except when such prices prevail. Upward from $1.00 a yard.

Embroidery You'll Need For Summer Sewing

Oftentimes new Embroidery around the top will thoroughly renew a chemise or nightgown, and children's underthings rarely come from the laundry that they don't need fresh embroidery some place or other. So it is well to have Embroidery in the mending basket at all times. Especially now when you are probably making new Summer lingerie you will want yards of it for trimming. Our assortment of patterns includes the newest designs and the special values are seen in every price.
Embroidery 3 1/2 inches wide at 15c a yard.
Swiss Embroidery, 9 inches wide at 29c a yard.
12 inch Eyelet Embroidery at 69c and 75c a yard.

WOMAN IS CHIEF OF INFORMATION BUREAU IN GOTHAM

Miss Josephine Roche is One of Business Women in American Metropolis

By Alice Roche
The busiest woman in New York—Who is she? Josephine Roche.

Why? Well, could a woman sit in a New York office surrounded by the problems of sixteen nationalities, her mental fingers on the pulse of each of them, without being almost as busy as half a dozen international conferences put together?

This remarkable young woman, Vassar, A. B.; Columbia, A. M.; chief probation officer and director of girls' work in the juvenile court of Denver; inspector of amusements and police-woman of Denver; special investigator National Consumers' League and too many other titles representing public service to be enumerated, is doing more to solve America's so-called foreign problem than any other one individual in the United States.

MANY SECTIONS
Director of Foreign Language Information Service, she has not only worked out a perfectly co-ordinated system of interpreting America to the alien and the alien to America, but she has, through practical proof of its vital need, secured financial backing.

A personally conducted tour by Miss Roche of the headquarters gives one quite a traveled feeling. "This is the Italian section," she said, "and the Lithuanian, Czechoslovak, Polish."

With complete disregard of frontiers and boundaries we visited 16 nationalities, all represented by men and women of fine education.

EAGER TO LEARN

"We serve sixteen nationalities," said Miss Roche. Czechoslovak, Danish, Dutch, Finnish, German, Hungarian, Italian, Jewish, Jugoslav, Lithuanian, Norwegian, Polish, Russian, Swedish and Ukrainian. "Assimilation cannot be forced on the immigrant," continued Miss Roche. "The foreign born are best fitted to work out their own problems of adjustment and they show a pathetic desire to be a part of rather than a problem of our life."

"Our work is divided into two parts, making our laws and life understandable to the foreign born and secondly, giving the native born an understanding of the problems, the injustices done the foreign born."

Statistically there isn't a loose end in the work of which Miss Roche is director, but even the perfect system does not overshadow the great human appeal.

Household Hints

PIANO KEYS

The piano keys can be cleaned without injury by rubbing them with a cloth moistened with alcohol.

KEEPING FLOWERS

Add a little bicarbonate of soda to the fresh water which you put in your cut flowers each day and they will last much longer.

FINGER MARKS

Rub the finger marks off the door with a little piece of flannel which has been dipped in paraffin oil.

A SUBSTITUTE

If you haven't an ironing board use a thick pad of newspaper on an ordinary table and cover them with an ironing sheet as you would a board.

CLEANING METHOD

Clean tea and coffee pots by putting into them a teaspoon of soda. Then half fill the pot with cold water, heat and let boil for five minutes. Empty and boil fresh water in them.

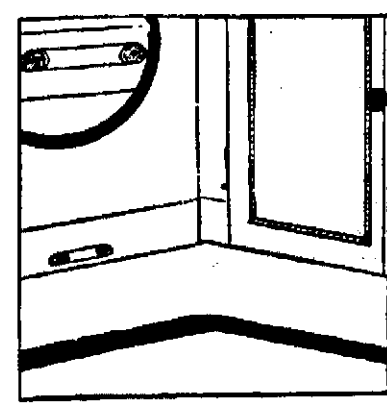

EASIER LAUNDERING

If the clothes which must be washed are put into a tub of lukewarm soapy water the night before, the rubbing on wash day will be considerably lessened. Colored clothing and stockings should not be allowed to thus remain in water, however.

RESTORING COLORS

A little alum dissolved in the rinse water will restore the color in green or black prints which have faded. A little vinegar in the rinsing water will restore red.

SPARE TIME JOBS FOR FATHER

When a door continually hangs against the floor baseboard it is annoying. Avoid this by tacking a small piece of rubber hose on the baseboard where the door hits.

DON'T USE SOAP ON VERY DRY SKIN

Use of Soaps Which Contain Too Much Alkali Make Skin Very Dry

BY HELENA RUBINSTEIN
Famous New York Beauty Specialist
A skin which is too dry is scarcely less annoying than one which is too oily. A too dry condition is brought about by the use of soaps which contain too much alkali, whose corrosive action, like the action of hard water through its contents of chalk and magnesium, deprives the skin of its lubricant.

Toilet preparations which contain much alcohol or glycerine should be avoided by the woman with the too dry skin. The non-greasy creams and those known as vanishing creams are also her natural enemies!

SUPPLY OILS
The dry skin is the one which no soap and water should touch. Cream should be used entirely for cleansing until the harsh condition has been eliminated, then a little water will do no harm.

A good skin food, soothing and cleansing in effect, a skin-toning lotion and a fatty powder are the most reliable mediums for combating a condition which tends toward wrinkles and a faded, lifeless complexion. The skin food should be patting just a few moments' gentle friction three days out of the week and in a month's time a harsh skin is beginning to soften and take on a beautiful luster.

Following the patting in of the skin food the skin toning lotion should be used. Then the powder should be lightly dusted on the face, never rubbed on with the heavy touch one sometimes sees young girls employing. Scrubbing powder, or in fact any toilet composition, into the skin ruins it. The heavy touch results in a sagging of muscles and the production of lines as well as sometimes spoiling the texture of the skin.

Better too light a touch than too heavy.

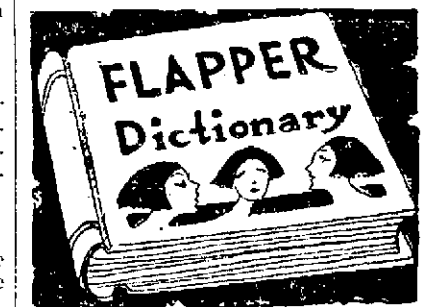

Her History Collection Is Best In State.

Pontiac, Mich.—When future historians of the United States need information concerning happenings of the long ago in the land of Chief Pontiac it is to the records and collections of Mrs. Lillian Drake Avery that they surely will turn for enlightenment.

For years Mrs. Avery has been gathering relics of the past, and keeping up current history of her state by means of great scrapbooks filled with newspaper clippings and personal jottings. Her home contains probably the largest collection on the story of Michigan.

During the war she was on the lookout for every scrap of information relating to doings of the Michigan troops and her war history of the state is said to be unrivaled in completeness.

Mrs. Avery is a daughter of the American Revolution and an officer in various local and state pioneer societies. Her work as an unofficial chronicler has the highest value from a historical standpoint.

BEST OF ANTI-FLAPPERS

AGNES DOHONEY

San Francisco—Here's the California "Convention Girl," selected by the Disabled American War Veterans in a unique beauty contest. Agnes Dohoney is her name.

Among the conditions of the contest were these: "No flappers, or flapper types shall be allowed to enter, or shall be considered if they enter."

"Old-fashioned beauty, plus character, will be an important factor in judging the winner."

"Contestants must have demonstrated that they have brains as well as beauty."

The winner will be chief of the hostesses during the veterans' national convention here in June. Also she will be the model for convention posters.

OUR FIRST YEAR

Chapter 21—Kitchen Chaos

By a Bride

YOU MAY BEGIN HERE
Despite the bride's efforts to live an independent life after marriage, she finds she cannot escape from her mother. She returns from her amateur theatrical club, worrying over financial difficulties caused by purchase of an expensive furniture set.

It was almost dinner time when I reached home after that trying day at the Little Playhouse. Not until I turned the key of my apartment did I remember in what a sad state I had left my suite.

The bed was unmade; Jack's pajamas adorned his shoe box; my house dress decorated a chair; the bathroom was strewn with damp towels; dust covered my handsome new davenport; and all the kitchen utensils I owned were piled in the sink side by side with my adorable Wedgwood dishes.

The cooking things had stood for 24 hours, since dinner the night before. And I positively hated them, as if they were at fault—and not I! I rushed into my white uniform and hurried about my work. I hoped to put the place in some kind of order before my husband arrived. To add this chaos to our recent discussion of finances was unthinkable.

But where to begin? I turned to my kitchen. Never had a pile of pots and pans looked so formidable! I felt that there was some hitch between my intention as a wife and my accomplishment.

For example, from an artistic standpoint, my little kitchen is quite charming to me. It's a tiny room, with a Pullman table between high-backed benches.

Checked gingham curtains brighten my windows and my aluminum spoons and saucers hang on the wall gaily and handsomely. I love my pretty kitchen when it is in order. But when chaos prevails,

The Doughnut Speech
There were more speeches at the party than I could remember. Nancy and Nick, sitting in the front row, were ever so much interested. Duskins said that he'd heard better poetry, but after all no one ever mixed food with art and it wasn't to be expected. The next speech was made by a doughnut, which said this:

"I'm just a little flower. As all of you can see. I'm very shy and very sweet. Afraid of all I chance to meet. So this is all of me." Duskins looked at his watch, which was very impolite, but necessary. "We must get back to the apple-tree elevator," said he, "and return to earth. We must make our adieu to our host."

LEARN A WORD EVERY DAY

Today's word is CONTRABAND.

It's pronounced—kon-tra-band, with accent on the first syllable.

It means—goods or merchandise the importation of which is forbidden; smuggled goods.

It comes from—Latin "contra," against, and a low Latin word of Teutonic origin, "bannum," edict or proclamation.

It's used like this—"The bootleggers landed a large cargo of contraband."

SUMMER FROCKS

Before making your small daughter's color print frocks for the summer, soak the material for half an hour in cold water to which a little salt has been added. This will set the color and shrink the material so the dress will neither fade nor become too small.

TAKE A TIP FROM TORCHY

You can see old ill-health coming, if you haven't proper plumbing.

The science of sanitation is the art of prevention. The proper plumbing in a home is of more importance than anything else that serves a family's daily needs. Plumbing should be inspected from time to time, as it gets out of order the same as any machinery. Perfect plumbing is a health measure.

'WIRED' WIRELESS TO SOLVE PROBLEM

Engineer Devises Method of Keeping Ether From Wireless Babel

By Harry B. Hunt
Special to The Post-Crescent

Washington — "Wired wireless" solves the problem of the label of the air created by radio enthusiasts.

Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, chief signal officer of the United States army, explained today how his development of "wired wireless" can be applied to practical problems of radio broadcasting and receiving.

Sitting at his desk in his office in the Munitions Building, General Squier turns the switch of his electric desk lamp. Immediately the strains of a violin solo by Mischa Elman flood the room, coming from an ordinary radio-receiving set in one corner.

SYSTEM IS SIMPLE

"There's nothing startling about it," says Squier, snapping off the switch. "For years we have been broadcasting all sorts of things by means of our electric lighting circuits—flat irons, vacuum cleaners, washing machines, dishwashers, curling irons, fans."

"Now by this system of controlled radio, we simply broadcast radio waves over a definite network of wires and into homes and offices in a definitely known zone, instead of sending them out at random to help confuse the ether."

RADIO NOW EXCLUSIVE

"One of the biggest handicaps to radio, heretofore, has been its all-inclusiveness. By this new method, radio may be made exclusive."

"Washington for instance, may broadcast for its citizens concerts, lectures, news-bulletins or any sort of information or entertainment without disturbing the ether for Baltimore or other nearby towns."

"By assigning wave-lengths, any number of broadcasting stations can feed messages into the Washington circuit, for Washington consumption, without cluttering up the ether for general radio work."

"This exclusiveness can be carried much further. Any hotel or building having its own electric system, can become a self-contained radio circuit."

With a radio amplifier in each room, connected with the hotel's own electric circuit, it would be possible for the music of the orchestra in the main dining room to be broadcasted to every guest room.

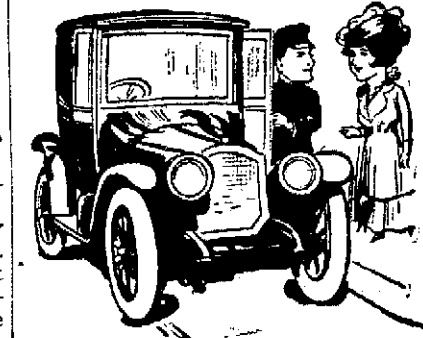

POSSIBILITIES INFINITE
"The possibilities are infinite. Both for business and personal uses, the development of a method of controlled radio immeasurably broadens the field of its practicable use.

"By making possible intensive radio broadcasting within the limits of a given city or community, without affecting the ether for other cities or for long distance radio communication, wired wireless greatly simplifies the problem of radio regulation."

The biggest asset of any nation being its people, one of the cardinal points of LIONISM is the cultivation of a spirit of genuine brotherhood among men.

History and Growth

THE Headquarters of the International Association of Lions Clubs is at Chicago, operating under a charter granted by the State of Illinois.

A meeting was held at Chicago in June, 1917, of various independent organizations, the outcome of which was the formation of the International Association of Lions Clubs.

The first convention convened at Dallas, Texas, with a roster of 25 clubs. The growth was greatly retarded by war conditions, but since that time 400 clubs have been completed.

The association is governed by a board of directors elected by the delegates at the annual convention, and consists of a president, three vice-presidents, secretary-treasurer and nine directors. All financial matters are under control of this board.

The board of directors has picked out every live city in the United States and, in fact, in every English-speaking country, and purpose establishing a Lions Club therein as quickly as possible.

PUPILS OF TRADE SCHOOL EARNING $85,000 A YEAR

Ford Shows How Vocational School Increases Wealth of Appleton

On request of the state board of vocational education, Appleton Vocational school, of which W. S. Ford is director, has compiled a report on the earnings of the student body showing the total annual wages of 151 boys who are attending school part time to be $85,566 or $1,645.50 per week.

This is about one half the yearly earnings of the students during the year 1920 when more were employed and wages were higher. Under normal conditions the vocational students are earning about $100,000 a year.

The question has been asked by a number of Appleton people whether the results accomplished in the vocational school justified the expenditure of money upon its maintenance. The money which the students earn while attending school is spent in Appleton thus increasing business to the extent of $100,000 a year which in turn adds to the wealth of the city, according to Mr. Ford. If the students were attending high school their education would be costing the city approximately $100 a year, Mr. Ford said.

The fact that they are required to go to work as soon as possible should not deprive the young people the right to continue the education in some vocational training, the director believes.

Mr. Ford said there are some people who question whether it is worth while to aid continuation of education for the young people. His reply is that a skilled workman receives twice as much pay as the unskilled men.

"If we consider," said Mr. Ford, "that 200 students are induced to enter the trades to prepare for special skilled work through contract with the vocational school during a period of four years, thereby doubling their earning power, this will amount to $18,000 over a period of thirty years for each child or a total of $5,400,000 increased earning power, which amount will be added to the wealth of the city every four years by the work of the continuation school."

On this basis, he said, the expenditure for maintaining the school is justified and no account has been taken of the increased productivity added by training given in evening school.

CALL CONVENTION OF PARENT-TEACHER CLUBS

The First and Third ward school Parent-Teachers associations probably will send delegates to the state convention of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers associations which will be held at Fond du Lac, May 18 and 19. The delegates have not been named but will be appointed at the next regular meeting of the association.

Fond du Lac is one of the eight cities in the state which has a central council of Parent-Teachers association. Because of the activities of the 11 association in the council, it was decided to hold the conference there this year. Headquarters will be at the Palmer house. The first meeting will take place at 9:30 Thursday morning, May 18.

ICE HOUSE IS DAMAGED WHEN ICE TIER FALLS

A tier of ice in the Lutz ice house at Lake Winnebago, which had been undermined by the flood fell over a few days ago taking a portion of the side of the building with it. A corner of the building gave away the day previous. Temporary repairs have been made to the building and no further trouble is anticipated. The water that surrounds the ice house near Pierce Park is subsiding and is now only eight inches deep.

Girls Who Smoke Are Not Fit Teachers, Mothers Say

Appleton Women Approve Dismissal of College Girls Who Use Cigaretts

Girls who smoke are not fit teachers for Appleton children, either, according to the opinion of three out of every four mothers of Appleton interviewed on the subject. But the three out of four women do not limit their freedom in smoking to teachers, they feel that no really fine woman will smoke if she has respect for herself or for the future generations.

What's all this excitement about, you say? Have the Appleton teachers been smoking? Why did I not know it before? No, they have not, but the future teachers at Michigan State Normal college at Ypsilanti have. The college is run by a cigarette war as the result of the dismissal of 17 girl students by Charles McKenney, president of the normal college and Mrs. Bessie Leach Priddy, dean of women. The dismissal charge was "social indiscretions."

The evidence against Miss Alice E. Tanton, 18, of Detroit was two cigarette stubs which her landlady found in her wastebasket and a head of blonde bobbed locks to which the dean of women objected. Miss Tanton would not abide by the decision of the school and took the case to court. And then the governor of Michigan, Alex Groesbeck, called a special meeting of the board of education which also will take up the smoking question.

LET 'EM SMOKE

The one opinion in the first four Appleton women interviewed who favored smoking is a pal for her several daughters. She laughed when asked about the harm that smoking by teachers would do, and said: "Surely they wouldn't smoke in school and if they do outside, what difference does it make? For all I know, some of my girls may smoke at school and I wouldn't consider that reason to have them sent home, whether they are to be school teachers or not. Someone told me that smoking makes women thin. If I thought it would, I believe I would smoke myself for I'm getting pretty fat."

LOSE RESPECT

The mother of a family of eight or nine children said: "A teacher who smokes would lose the respect of her students and would lose her control in class. It is bad enough when the boys learn to smoke. I think it splendid that Prof. Keller and now Prof. Roney are so much opposed to the boys in high school smoking. Of course, some girls have smoked on a care or with a crowd, but few of them would care to have the smoking habit."

Another mother of small children but who comes in contact with a great many university young people said: "The dean of women was right. When girls break the rules of the school, they should be dismissed. The real danger with smoking is the forming of the habit. I suppose an occasional cigarette really wouldn't do a girl harm, but it does break down the moral standard of the school. Some mothers think their daughters are smart when they do it. I know of one who sent a package of cigarettes to her daughter in a boarding school."

because the girls liked to tease the dean in charge."

The mother of daughters and sons of college age said: "If you want a favorable opinion, you have come to the wrong person because not even my men folks smoke. My father used to, but he, too has stopped. No woman, whether she be a school teacher or not who hopes to be or is a mother would smoke if she felt any responsibility toward the next generation. Besides, it is a loathsome habit and most annoying to others. The men claim it is a social habit, but some of them do as well without it."

DR. SPENCER MAY HEAD JOURNALIST FRATERNITY

That Dr. M. L. Spencer, formerly of Lawrence college and now director of the School of Journalism of the University of Washington is to be a candidate for the presidency of Pi Delta Epsilon, international journalistic fraternity is rumored in the fraternity circles. The annual national convention of the fraternity opened at the University of Illinois at Urbana on Friday.

Herbert Mundhenke, editor of The Lawrentian, Ray Collins, business manager of The Ariel and Prof. W. B. Lindsay, head of the journalism department at Lawrence are representing the Lawrence chapter at the convention.

Dr. Spencer has always been prominent in college journalism circles. He was a charter member of Eta Theta Epsilon, the national journalistic fraternity which was founded at Lawrence in 1916 and merged with Pi Delta Epsilon in 1917.

NATIONAL GUARD WILL GO TO CAMP

$170,000 to be Expended in Improving Military Reservation at Camp Douglas

Appleton Co. D, 127th infantry will go to the 1922 summer encampment of the Wisconsin national guard as originally planned, according to an announcement by Orlando Holway, adjutant general, that the encampment will be held as scheduled.

A congressional cut in funds for summer encampments made plans for Wisconsin uncertain, he said, but an agreement has been reached to make up the deficiency before the troops take up their fifteen days' summer training.

Cavalry troops will open Camp Douglas July 3. The first division of the infantry will begin training July 17, and the second division will start its field training Aug. 1. The artillery units will commence training at Camp Custer, on Aug. 14.

Improvements amounting to $170,000 will be made at Camp Douglas. Contracts for sanitation and heating equipment has already been let by the state military department, according to a report by the state engineer.

RADIO PROGRAMS ON RAILROAD TRAINS

St. Paul Line is Entertaining Its Passengers on Long Journeys

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. is furnishing radio entertainments on its Pioneer Limited trains between Chicago and Minneapolis according to a circular received by A. W. Liese, local agent.

Powerful receiving sets have been installed in the library buffet cars and in these unique traveling auditoriums a radio program is given every evening as a feature of the service.

On the train leaving Chicago the patrons of the road are entertained by the programs sent out from the station in Chicago, and on the east bound train from Minneapolis and St. Paul the passengers are entertained by the musical numbers and readings sent out from Minneapolis.

The receiving apparatus, however, is not confined to the broadcasting of the Chicago and Minneapolis stations, and by "tuning in" the programs are varied by selections sent out from Pittsburgh and other stations.

MANY SEEK JOBS; MANY ARE PLACED

Sixty-thousand more men asked for work at United States employment offices in Wisconsin during March than in February, according to reports issued by the department of Labor at Washington, D. C.

This condition ordinarily would be a serious one, but the reports show that industry absorbed more than 37,000 men in March above those supplied with jobs in February.

There were registrations for work during March totaling 238,052, and 165,849 calls for help received. The offices referred 164,223 men to firms having vacancies and had reports showing that 135,837 were placed. Oshkosh is the nearest government employment center.

The White Desert

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Fate had seen fit to mold the life of BARRY HOUSTON into tragic molds. Tried for the murder of his cousin, TOM LANGDON, an acquitted because of favorable testimony of JAMES JERDON, Houston's father dies without regaining faith in his son. He leaves Barry timber holdings in Tabernacle only on condition that a high output be maintained. Mysterious accidents in the mills have prevented this and Houston, arriving from Boston, finds that he has been betrayed by his mill superintendent, FRED THAYER. Houston discharges Thayer. First the mill is burned down and then Houston is deprived of a forged lease, of the rights to his timber lands. With the aid of BATISTE RENAUD, an eccentric French-Canadian, whose life had been saddened by double tragedy of his son's death in France and the unsolved murder of his wife, Houston continued the fight. During his stay in Tabernacle, Houston has been attracted by MEDAINE ROBINETTE, owner of neighboring timber lands. He tells her that Thayer's statement that he was accused of murder is true.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

A slight gasp traveled over the lips of Medaine, still by the window. Batiste, his features old and lined, reached out with one big hand and patted the man on the shoulder. Then for a long time, there was silence. "Batiste," Houston turned appealingly to him. "As I live, that's all I know. I never saw Langdon after he took that mallet from me. Only one shred of evidence was presented in my behalf. It was by a woman who had worked about six months for my father—Miss Jerdon. She testified to having passed in a taxi cab just at the end of our quarrel, and that Langdon had the mallet."

"Miss Jerdon is the same one who is out here?"

"Yes."

"She testified in your behalf?"

"Yes. And Miss Robinette, if you'll only talk to her—if you'll only ask her about it, she'll tell you the story exactly as I've told it. She trusted me; she was the only bright spot in all the blackness. I may not be able to convince you, but she could. Miss Robinette, if you'll only—"

"Would you guarantee the truth of anything she should tell me?"

"Absolutely."

"I'm—I'm sorry." She turned again to the window. Houston went forward.

"Sorry? Why? There's nothing—"

"Miss Jerdon has told me," came in a strained voice, "that she did pass as you were struggling. That she saw the mallet—and that it was you who struck it."

"Miss Robinette?"

"That further, you confessed to her and told her why you had killed Langdon—because he had discovered something in your father's life that would serve as blackmail. That she loved you. And that because she loved you, she went on the stand and perjured herself to save you from a conviction of murder—when she knew in her heart that you were guilty."

CHAPTER XI

It was a blow greater, far greater than one that could have been struck in mere physical contact. Houston reeled with the effect of it; he gasped, he struggled aimlessly, futile for words to answer it. Vaguely, dizzily, Houston started to the door, only to be pulled back in the gigantic grip of Batiste Renaud.

"No! No! You shall not go! You tell Medaine that it is a lie!"

"It is!" Houston heard his voice as though coming from far away, "but I don't know how to answer it. Where is Miss Jerdon?"

"Miss Jerdon," Medaine Robinette answered with an effort, "went back to camp last night."

They drove on in silence. Ten minutes later, Houston leaped from the buggy and knocked at the door of the cottage.

"I want to see Miss Jerdon," he told the cook who had opened the door.

The cook hustled back into the house to return with a sealed envelope addressed to Houston.

"Dearest Barry: 'Hate awfully to run away like this without seeing you, but it can't be helped. Have an offer of a position in St. Louis that I can't very well refuse. Will write you from there. 'Love and Kisses. 'AGNES' making of a bid that ran into the millions, an adventure for a contract for which they had neither mill, nor timber, nor flume, nor resources to complete!

CHAPTER XII

Time dragged after that. Once the bid was on its way to Chicago, there was nothing to do but wait.

December came. February and then—

"Bat is come! Bat is come!" Batiste, waving his arms wildly, in spite of the stiffness of his heavy mackinaw. "Bat is come! I have open out—I can not wait. Bat say we shall have the contract! Ah, out! out! out! out!"

"Bat say five thousand dollars cash, and the rest in a bond!" came enthusiastically from Batiste. "Bat see he have the friend in Denver who will make the bond."

"But how about the machinery; we'll need a hundred-thousand-dollar plant before we're through, Batiste."

"Ah!" The old French-Canadian's jaw dropped. "Bat see he have not think of that."

"Tomorrow morning we take the train to Denver, and from there I'll go on to Boston. I'll raise the money some way."

They went on to Denver, there to seek out the few friends Batiste possessed, to argue one of them into a loan of ten thousand dollars on the hand and trustworthy qualities which formed the total of Batiste's resources, to gain from the other the necessary bond to cover the contract—a contract which Barry Houston knew only to well might never be fulfilled.

Came Chicago and the technicalities of ironing out the final details of the contract. Then, dealer in millions and possessor of nothing, Houston went onward toward Boston.

He wandered the aisle of the sleeper, entered the smoking compartment and slumped into a seat in a far corner, smoking in a detached manner, often pulling on his cigar long after lengthy minutes of reflection had allowed his ashes to cool.

About him the usual conversation raged. With sudden interest, Houston forgot his own problems to listen.

"Speaking of gruesome things," the talker had said, "reminds me, I'm a doctor, former interne in Bell-strand Hospital in New York."

"They're a big room on the fifth floor where somebody is always dissecting. One Sunday night I happened to look in and saw a man in there, murdering another with a wooden mallet."

"Murdering him?" The doctor laughed.

"Well, I should have said, acting out a murder. You can't very well murder a dead man. The fellow he was killing was already a corpse."

"You mean—"

"Just what I'm saying. Pretty big doctors, I learned, all from Boston. They had taken a cadaver from the refrigerator and stood it in a certain position. Then the one man had struck it on the head with the mallet with all the force he could summon. Of course it knocked the corpse down—I'm telling you, it was gruesome, even to an internist. The last I saw of them, the doctors were working with their microscopes—evidently to see what effect the blow had produced."

"What was the idea?"

"Never found out. You see, opposite sides in a trial are always carrying out experiments and trying to keep the other fellow from knowing what's going on."

"You—you don't know who the men were?" Houston, forcing himself to be casual, had asked the question. The young doctor shook his head.

"No—except that they were from Boston. I suppose the other man was a district attorney."

"You never learned with what murder case it was connected?"

"No."

"Pardon me for asking. I—I come from Boston and was trying to recall such a case. You don't remember what time of the year it was, or how long ago?"

"Yes, I do. It was in the summer, along about two or two and a half years ago."

Houston slumped back into his corner.

But once in his berth, the picture continued to rise before him of a man "killing" another with a mallet. Had it been Worthington, the determined, over-zealous district attorney, who had struggled to send him to the penitentiary for life? Yet—if that had been Worthington, if those experts had found evidence against him—

Why had this damning evidence not been used against him?

Janet Taylor---Wife

By Virginia Lynch Maxwell.

IT was after twelve o'clock when Dr. McLean finished with his patient. He came out of the house a bit flustered. For Janet had been waiting anxiously for him in the car outside, while he worked over the sick child within.

"I shouldn't have taken you, Janet," he said, using her intimate name for the first time, "had I known it would be a surgical case. But the youngster needed real attention. Have you been chilly?" Janet had shivered. And Dr. McLean had noticed it as he spoke.

"No," she replied quickly, "it's just that—that Carlie will be thinking all sorts of foolish things. I know baby Junior is well taken care of back at the hotel. I instructed the nurse to get him into bed early. But Carlie—well, you know how Carlie is."

Paul McLean smiled as he tucked the robe about her feet. He stepped in and instantly they were speeding off toward the long road that led out to the farm.

"Don't worry about Carlie, little lady," he remarked in a light tone, "Carlie would think things of any one. That's one of her pet ways of amusing herself."

In the distance the sea rolled back from the road. And now, as they approached the curve that would have taken them to the road that led toward the inn, the dark sky became suddenly illumined by a flash of red.

Janet caught her breath. "That's lightning," she cried; "it's going to storm. Oh, please, please hurry."

"Calm yourself, Janet," said Paul McLean gently, using the intimacy he had determined upon. "It's only a bit of heat lightning. There are too many stars for a rain."

Dr. McLean put on more and more speed. But the elements were against him. Without warning, the rain began to fall in torrents and the patter of it on the cover of the car came to Janet's ears with a sickening fear.

"Do hurry," she begged, "the lightning is growing worse." The car shot forward with more speed, until it seemed like a streak of darkness clinging to blurred headlights that pierced their way through the intense blackness.

With a sudden leap, it struck something unyielding in the road. The lights crashed into splintering glass and the car tipped on its side, hurling Janet into the muddy ditch.

Paul McLean climbed out of the upper side and made his way to Janet's white form. She lay back. "Janet, Janet, are you hurt?" he cried excitedly, trying to rouse her.

But Janet had succumbed to the shock of the accident and had fainted. Dr. McLean leaned over, his head on her bosom, one arm about her waist as he prepared to lift her.

Suddenly he whipped out the auto robe, spread it on the ground and laid the girl across its dry surface.

He stood up and looked all about him. There was not a light in sight and only the occasional booming of the sea broke the steady patter of rain and the intermittent claps of thunder that filled the air. He pulled and pushed at the car in a terrible effort to move it from its position. But every jerk seemed only to make it sink deeper into the soft mud that oozed above its tires.

He went back again to Janet's side and now he saw that her eyes were open. He leaned over once again and this time began to rub her wrists.

"Paul," she whispered faintly, "what's happened?" "Just a little accident," he told her gently, "and you fainted. Are you hurt, Janet?"

She moved her little young body in an effort to get up, but fell back with a little groan.

"I'm afraid I've hurt my ankle," He removed her slim white slipper, now splashed with the brown mud, and moved the joint of her ankle in a professional manner.

"Hurt?" "Terribly!" She uttered a little cry.

"Please get me into the car," she begged, "and let's get back to town. I'm so tired. I don't think we'd better attempt now to go back for Carlie and Jack."

Paul McLean hesitated for a minute. He did not have courage enough to tell her of their predicament.

"The car's wrecked," he blurted in an embarrassed tone, "and I can't turn it back to the road. It's toppled in the ditch."

Janet uttered a low moan.

"In Heaven's name," she cried, "what are we going to do? Is there no farm house around here? No place where I may stay?" "I've taken a panorama," he told her, "and there seems to be nothing nearby. In fact, I know there isn't."

"What shall we do?" Her tone

American Beauties—Miss Betty Compson, Who Has Won Recognition as One of the Reigning Beauties of the Pacific Coast was hysterical. "Have faith in ourselves," he told her calmly, "because I can't leave you here alone and walk on to the inn. It's at least ten miles from here, and if I tried to carry you, neither of us would make it."

She looked at him with wide, horror-stricken eyes as she realized their predicament. Then she buried her face in her hands and began to sob hysterically.

"It's not what we think," she sobbed, "but what Carlie will make the world think."

"It's not what anyone else thinks,"

Janet," he assured her, "so long as we know everything is all right. Dry your eyes, little lady, and try to get yourself together. Meanwhile, I'll sit out here at the roadside and wait to hail the first car that goes by in the morning."

(To Be Continued.)

A Word to New Brides

EVERY girl looks forward to her wedding day with a feeling that she will live in an entirely different kingdom with her chosen man after the ceremony is over. That, of course, is true. It shall be the kingdom of perfect love to all brides.

But just as surely as the new love element will enter into the new life, so will come those trying days when all the world seems out of harmony. Bills will come in and face the bride at the most inopportune times, and she will be apt to lose her temper at the small annoyances about her. There will be times, too, when, during the most exacting period of two personalities adjusting themselves to each other during the first few years; petty arguments will arise.

Your man, like others before him, may speak right out before your friends or family when you try to explain a point in history and say, "Why, Mary, you don't know what you are talking about." Or, perhaps, he will, unthinkingly, almost instinctively blurt forth without thought of the hurt it carries to his partner, "You women are all like that."

These are the danger signals. Wise is the little lady who can take these dangerous matrimonial corners without accident. It is a matter of studied tact how to overcome these little love scratches that mean so much to the home-harmony the wife must inspire.

There is the matter, too, of house-keeping details that are very often responsible for the tragic ending of many well-launched marriages. The wife should come to her new duties prepared to understand her job. No mother should allow her daughter to marry, whether she is able to afford all the servants obtainable, unless the new wife is prepared to take hold of her new job of household manager. For this lack there is no excuse to-day, as even the girl whose days are given up entirely to office work before she marries may prepare herself at any one of a number of evening schools where domestic science is taught in condensed form.

On the other hand, there is the opposite type who often wrecks her own happiness by an overdone sense of her housewifely duties. She is the woman who eventually drives her husband from the home because it annoys her to have him get ashes on the rugs, makes him uncomfortable about invading his friends for a little repast because his new wife so clearly shows what it means to her in added bother and trouble.

Brides who have gone before will argue that the new woman will not be cowed into behaving like an automaton to please any man. They, of course, are perfectly justified. But there is the happy medium that renders all married troubles as minor emotions to the great overwhelming knowledge that love does exist.

"I'm sorry, dear," has healed more wounds than any balm in the world. Analyze your view of the subject. In question, honestly and openly, when those petty arguments arise, and try to find out if you are not really the one to blame. Then, if you are, do not be too narrow to admit your fault.

Corset Modes to Comply With Gown Lines

WITH every change in the lines of the newest gowns the designers immediately begin to adjust the corset modes to comply with the new silhouette. There was a time when the corset modeled the individual figure and the gown had to be adjusted to meet the demands of the figure. But woman has evidenced the desire to be up to the minute in style and so she has created another programme. The gown is designed first. The corsetiers take their cue from the lines of the gown. And the woman who wears both, must adjust her own figure to meet the demands of the fashion authorities.

The newest models show a light ly-boned, low-bust effect so popular throughout the past season. Despite the Moyenne waist, that the gown designers have given as their creation this season, there has been little tendency to alter the wide waist line of the corset. It is claimed that women prefer the flat hip effect in spite of the inharmonious of other lines, so that the new fitted waists are unlike the styles of a generation ago because the modern figure beneath them retain their natural appearance and defy the pulled-in waist line our grandmothers used to take.

"Brassieres" Are New. There is a new type of corset on the market now which combines the corset with the brassiere and is called a "brassierelette," since it is fitted by bust measure and not by waist line. These are being shown in satin and in cotton models and a fashion front brassiere is also made up in these varied materials. It is proclaimed by the shops that the combination corset is being taken up by women who indulge in active work, whether it be business or sport.

In pink satin, the new brassieres have deep cut fronts, to which are attached two supporters. The back is shaped to form a V to which two more suspenders are attached. At the sides, shaped in sorts of elastic are used. This same model is developed in mercerized brocade and silk jersey, and the shoulder straps have little inserts of elastic. This feature, it is said, serves to hold them in place, especially for the stout figure.

The new diaphragm belt is one of the new corset modes now on display. The front section, which is a plain flat piece, has three strips of feather boning that give the flattening effect. In the back of this garment there are two elastic loops, and these are meant to go over buttons sewed to the corset, so that the garment will not slip up when worn.

A diaphragm belt is shown, made of plain and fancy material, with elastic strips at the sides. It is said that an increased demand is noted for brocade garments, in pink.

For the slim Miss who merely uses her corset as a foundation for her frocks, there is the corset petticoat. A wide belt with boning over the abdomen and back, but leaving the hips perfectly natural in their graceful curves, is elongated into a sort of short petticoat. The material is of heavy brocade and gives sufficient foundation to the fuller skirt so as to make the wearing of an underskirt unnecessary.

For Negligee Hours.

Sometimes in those weary afternoons when the negligee is the most comfortable robe to don, women who are inclined to be stout are at a loss to know just how to be comfortable without corsets. Yet they do not care to allow such full play to the lines of the figure as most negligees demand. For this very purpose comes the abdominal girdle, that is slightly boned and fastened by heavy snap hooks on one hip. It is sufficiently wide to detract some of the waist line curves and yet quite so unlike a corset that it allows perfect freedom of movement and therefore genuine comfort. To its lower edge are attached two sets of rubber garters to hold the hosiery in place during those peaceful hours of relaxation.

Brassieres have become so fancy in their newest appearance that the silk camisole is beginning to step out of its popular place. Combining the two-in-one was a happy thought for some clever designer. And the fashion hint is eagerly being taken up by women whose dressing time is limited.

In pink satin, of heavy washable quality, some of the new brassieres make their appearance. The top edge is fashioned of fancy lace and ribbon, and one sees their fronts that peek through the lacy house embroidered, appliqued and sometimes in cut-out work to make them decorative as well as practical.

My Secrets of Charm

By Marilyn Miller.

FOR every woman there is a twentieth century magic culled from the art of centuries past. It was the secret of the Egyptian beauties for years, and no one doubts that the famous Cleopatra used it to bring out the fine texture of her skin and give it that healthy glow so suggestive of youth.

It is the new method beauty culturists are using to rejuvenate sallow or grayish complexions, and it is of particular benefit to the tired or relaxed skin that evidences itself prematurely in so many business and professional women who have not the time for a daily treatment.

You may learn to "firm up" those relaxed muscles at the sides of your face and throat and give your skin the benefit of the scientific knowledge my personal beauty specialist has passed on to me. With a little patient practice and enough time for the treatment complete, you may do it at home.

First, as in all massage, the skin must be perfectly cleansed. Apply your cleansing cream gently and pat it, rather than rub it, on to the skin. When it has begun to melt, wipe it gently with downward strokes, using a bit of old sterilized linen for the purpose.

Make for yourself a mixture of one pint of luke-warm water with a half teaspoon of bicarbonate of soda. Dip a bit of absorbent cotton in the mixture and go over the surface of the face completely. The soda solution removes the excess fatty matter that may have remained from the cleansing cream and renders the skin favorable for the next step.

A pound of precipitated chalk is used as the foundation for the bleaching mask. Stir the chalk into a composition by using enough warm water to make it soft and creamy. With the finger tips or with a small, soft paint brush kept exclusively for this purpose, spread the composition thickly, but as evenly as possible over the face, including the throat and chest. But do not allow the composition to cover the eyelids or lips.

Having done this, relax completely. Lie back on your couch and close your eyes. Try to control your thoughts so that nothing unpleasant enters the mind. It is well to have your boudoir in semi-darkness during this stage of the treatment as the half-toned light is more restful. If you cannot induce a nap, try lying perfectly quiet and do not speak or attempt to move the facial muscles while the mask is on.

If your skin is oily, the mask should be allowed to remain on the face from one to three hours after it has dried and hardened. If your skin is dry, leave it on for one hour only. When the cast has thoroughly dried, it may be gently removed by dipping a towel into hot water and gently mopping the face until the mask is softened and removed.

Wipe the crevices about the eyes, the nostrils and the ears very carefully. You will notice that your skin has now become several shades whiter and that the relaxed muscles are tightened and therefore youthful.

The massage cream is used next. It is applied as I have described in a previous article and massaged well into the skin with the rotary movements I mentioned some time ago.

When the cream has been allowed to remain on the skin for ten minutes, wipe it off and apply a warm towel to open the pores and extract the superfluous massage cream. This is followed immediately by an ice-cold application. Particular care should be used that the hot and cold applications do their work on that dangerous flabbiness that eventually develops into the dreaded double chin, just below the jaws.

The mask treatment is concluded by an astringent lotion which may be made of diluted toilet water or a dash of witch hazel in cold water to close the pores again and leave the skin smooth and clean. A light dusting of face powder and a dash of rouge are applied and you may face a critical world with confidence. This is the building-up method of attaining beauty that defies the look of artificiality. And best of all this treatment may be applied right in your own home.

Training the Backward Child

EVERY mother who studies the problem of her backward child will sooner or later discover that there is an underlying reason. More than once this reason may be put down to lack of interest in the study attempted.

At a school meeting recently where this question was under discussion, one mother told of the method she used to bring her little girl up to the class standard in arithmetic. She was allowed to come into the kitchen and help mother prepare dinner each afternoon after school. The mother provided a pair of small scales and measures. The little girl played at keeping store with her mother, measuring various substances from the pantry, and it was astonishing, the mother related, how quickly she learned the practical side of the rules which had been mysteries.

A small boy's mother taught him his geography by a similar practical method, reading to him of interesting places and persons and having him cut out the pictures and classifying them in different envelopes. This not only put him ahead of the other pupils of his class in geography but gave him some valuable knowledge in current events.

The argument is sure to be raised as to why teachers should not employ this method. The teacher has not the time. It is a crude method to use and only for the sub-normal child. Most children are able to grasp their studies from the explanation the teacher will make.

Each treatment consequently develops into a case of individual responsibility. The mother of the backward child has a real obligation to meet and it should present a happy duty. There is truly a wonderful stimulus in gently leading a small child to a consciousness of power to think and reason for himself. It is from this force the future of the world will be built.

Some of the biggest men in the country were backward in their youth. Many of the children who could not do arithmetic later became geni of the literary world. And throughout the alumnae meetings of every college we find examples of this kind.

Building blocks have helped many a boy find his chosen vocation. A set of building blocks is claimed to have been the inspiration of one of our biggest engineers to-day finding himself. All sorts of mechanical toys, not necessarily the expensive kind and preferably a product that your boy himself can invent, will help wonderfully in training him to find his natural inclinations.

A naughty little boy who scorned engines, but who had a perfect mania for digging the stitches from his sister's doll so that invariably the sawdust left its tell-tale trail, has today become one of our big surgeons. But that was chiefly because the parents of the boy watched keenly for his natural inclination. And when the time came for the boy to choose his career, the watchful parents had already prepared themselves financially for the medical school the boy chose at once.

The backward child is the real problem. But if care and patience are exercised it ought to be no great difficulty to help the child up and on to the place he will eventually gain in adult life.

Poems for Your Scrap Book

THE MISSION OF LOVE.

I SUMMONED my two servants—both were strong—
And bade them take two packs I fain would send
Upon a journey that was very long,
And leave them at the hearthstone of my friend.
One servant's name was Love, the other Duty,
Alike in some respects, in others not.
Love was fair and garlanded in beauty,
While Duty looked severe with anxious thought.
They started off upon the rugged road.
I watched them as they climbed the lofty hill.
Each bravely bearing up the heavy load.
Each looked as though his task he would fulfill.
Ere they had reached the cragged mountain's top,
Duty fell and quit, to my dismay.
And then I knew, when Love refused to stop,
Duty soon tires, Love goes all the way.

Tell to Sell

There's more than one way to describe an apple. One man might say it was just an apple. Another would tell about it in such an appetizing way—you immediately would become apple hungry—He'd make you want that apple.
Same way with Want Ads. Let your Want Ad Tell to Sell. Write it in such a way that the reader will know just what you have. Use enough words to tell the story. Don't think it wise to write a short advertisement when it takes a long one to describe what you have. It's poor economy to use too little space—TELL TO SELL.

APPLETON BASEBALL SEASON WILL OPEN SUNDAY

Brandt Aggregation Is Ready For Battle With Fast New London Team

Players in Shape for Game That Will Get Underway at 2 O'clock—Local Lineup and Batting Order Announced.

UNGRI Appleton baseball fans will get their first peep at the local entry in the Fox River Valley league pennant race Sunday afternoon when the Brandt aggregation clashes with the fast New London outfit in Appleton ball orchard.

The game is scheduled to get underway at 2 o'clock and the admission price will be 25 cents. The weather man has promised Sunday will be clear and warm and it is expected a great crowd of fans will be out to see the Appleton team in action.

Appleton players are in good shape working out for more than two weeks for the contest. They have been working out for more than two weeks and have had two practice sessions together. They are ready to put up a fast brand of the national pastime against the invaders. The New London athletes have been working to gether for about three weeks and are playing in near mid-season form. The teams will put up a snappy exhibition of baseball and the game will give the local fans a line on the strength of the Appleton club.

Manager August Brandt has assembled a fast aggregation of pastimes for his team. He has a sweet fielding and a hard hitting team and one that should be well up in the Fox River Valley league flag chase during the entire season. In Schiltz he has a pitcher who will compare favorably with any in the circuit and Shott is a reliable and heady performer behind the plate. The team is the strongest that has represented Appleton on the ball diamond for many years.

Manager Brandt has announced how his hired hands will line up in Sunday's tussle and the batting order. The men will hit as follows:

Like if Beyer, rf Keene ss, Klavitter, 1b Gaffske 2b Duran cf, Schott, c, Leopold, 3b, Schultz, p.

Ruth's Latest Rival

WILLIAMS IN ACTION. INSET (LEFT) WILLIAMS, (RIGHT) RUTH

By Billy Evans
While Babe Ruth home run king, is sitting in the grandstand as a mere spectator, Kenneth Williams of the St. Louis Browns is hogging the sporting spotlight as slugger extraordinary. Williams' feat of hitting three home runs in one game on Saturday April 22, sets a modern baseball record.

Ruth's best home run performance in a single game is two home runs. It has been 25 years since any player made three home runs in one game. On September 26, 1897, Jake Beckley, now dead, accomplished such a feat.

Only 11 players in the history of baseball have made three home runs in one game.

In four games Williams has hit six home runs. Babe Ruth is the only other player to boast such a record, making it last season.

During the season of 1882 Muldoon of Cleveland made five home runs in three games, as did King Kelly of Chicago in 1884 and Rube Ruth of New York in 1921.

A desire to emulate the deeds of Babe Ruth has made Williams a hitter of the slugger type.

While Williams has always been known as a hard hitter in baseball up until last season he usually hit more balls on a line, rather than lifting them over the fence.

I was sitting on the bench in St. Louis on the day that I believe Williams shifted from the line hitter to the slugger.

The day previous Williams had been retired on three towering fly balls that just failed to clear the fence. Sitting on the bench Williams was bemoaning his tough luck.

If you would take a healthy cut of the ball like Ruth you would be pushing him hard for home run honors' remarked one of the players.

If you would start pulling those balls on the inside into the rightfield, you would hit 15 or 20 home runs on this park every year' said another teammate.

Several other St. Louis players offered advice. All of them lauded the ability of Williams to hit.

'Looks as if all these guys think I am a better hitter than I do myself. Starting today I am going to take a healthy cut.'

That afternoon Williams made a home run. He has been making a lot of them ever since.

Last season with Bob Meusel he was a runner up to Babe Ruth with 21 circuit drives to his credit.

SUMMARY OF SPORTS

New York—Yale and Columbia crews meet this afternoon on the Harlem river. The juniors will be called to the mark at 5 o'clock by Referee Julian Curtiss of Yale and the varsity a half hour later.

New York—Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion and Harry Greb, Pittsburg, have been signed to meet for the title at Madison Square garden on May 26. They will go 16 rounds and make 175 pounds.

Syracuse—Tommy Loughnan, Philadelphia, middleweight, won the decision over Jimmy Daicy, Portland, Maine, in 12 rounds.

BADGER ATHLETES IN MEETS TODAY

Compete in Penn Relays and Big Western Carnival at Drake University

Madison, Wis.—The University of Wisconsin will be represented Saturday at both the Drake relays at Des Moines, and the Penn relays in Philadelphia.

Dale Merrick, crack pole-vaulter and Alvin Knollin, one of the leading dash and hurdle men of the Big Ten are at Philadelphia to compete in the eastern event. Merrick won the pole vault at the Penn games last year with a leap of 12 feet 9 and 3 inches while Knollin is invading the east for the first time.

Coach Tom Jones left Friday for Des Moines at the head of a squad of a dozen men. This action is in accordance with the other big ten and western schools, who threw the majority of their track athletes to the Drake University meet.

Jones entered teams in all five relay races—the quarter, the half, the mile, the two-mile and the four mile but the Badger runners probably will start in only three of them, the mile, the two-mile, and the 440-yard dash.

IF THIS PLAY COMES UP

Here's Your Decision

If the catcher interferes with the batter in striking at a pitched ball the batsman is entitled to first base. For example, if the catcher tipped the bat of the batsman as he swung at the ball, and a foul or fair fly ball was the result, said fly ball being caught the batsman would be entitled to first base. Regardless of what happens the action of the catcher entitles the batsman to first.

Birdhouse Display Has Some Novel Creations

About 30 bird houses made by Boy Scouts in the bird house contest are now being exhibited in the show window of Galpin's Sons Hardware store. More birdhouses will be placed in the window Saturday afternoon and will remain on display until Monday.

The display offers a good variety of styles, sizes and colors. They range from simple wooden boxes with holes, large apartment houses for martins, with two and half inch holes and many rooms, log houses, birch bark houses, houses built from a single log, are suggestive of the wide range of the kinds displayed.

Most of the wren houses are duplex flats, while the mother bird hatches the eggs in one, the father bird is engaged in building a nest in compartment No. 2, so as to keep Mrs. Wren busy. The wren has two broods, H. B. Buck, scout executive, explained. The robin houses were made with two of the sides open, as this is the only kind of house a robin will choose. A novel bird house is made from a coconut shell which is sawed in two pieces, emptied of its contents, laced together and suspended by a chain.

Prizes will be awarded to the three scouts who have built the best and most serviceable houses. The prizes consist of a scout axe, a baseball and a baseball bat. They are donated by Galpin's.

HEINZKILL WINS TALKING CONTEST AT HIGH SCHOOL

Young Man is Eligible to Compete in State Contest at Lawrence

Joseph Heinzkill won first, Raymond Pink second, and Gertrude Stier third place in the extemporaneous speaking contest at the high school Friday morning. Others competing for honors were Harold Zuehlke, Richard Nelson, Rosetta Segal, David Bender and Arnold Purves.

The contest was the sequel of two preceding elimination contests, in which 12 to 15 students took part each night. The four best speakers of each night made up list of contestants in Friday's tilt. Judges were Miss Ruth McKennan, Miss Elsie High and B. W. Wells.

Not one of the speakers knew one subject he or she was to speak on until the time of drawing of lots. Among the subjects listed were the Agricultural Bloc; British Diplomacy Meets Russian; Canned Experience; The Lesson of Books; The Growth of the Soil; America's Problems; No Long or Distinctive; The Nation Swallows Up the States; Modern Cave Dwellers; A Defense of Capital; Shall Labor Go Into Politics; Abolish Congress; Boost the Tariff Sky-High; School is Best; Modern Tweeds; The State Department Reports on the Junior High School; Public Opinion of Today and Tomorrow; The Dyes Have It; The Peace; The Theory of Balance in Human Affairs; The Search for Normalcy; Farming Big Business; Flowers That Bloom in the Spring; Ten-La-La-La.

Each contestant was given but three minutes in which to make the speech. Some of the speakers were eliminated because they spoke over time.

Joseph Heinzkill, who won first honors, will now enter the Lawrence college contest to compete for a scholarship. The winner of first place in that contest will receive a two year scholarship, the second a one year scholarship and third a half year scholarship.

The sectional oratorical and declamatory contest will be held in the Appleton high school Friday evening. Teams from Green Bay, Neenah, Menasha, Kaukauna and Appleton will take part. Appleton high school will be represented by Rosetta Segal in the declamatory contest and "The Ashes of Roses," and by Richard Nelson in the oratorical contest.

"The People's Tragedy." The winners of this contest will be eligible to participate in the district contest, which will be followed by an elimination contest and the state declamatory and oratorical contest.

VAN RYZIN DEMANDS TRIAL BY A JURY

Preliminary hearing of Leo Van Ryzin, who is charged with having a still in his possession for purpose of unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquor, was held in the lower branch of municipal court Friday afternoon. On his plea of not guilty he was bound over by Judge A. M. Spencer to the higher branch of the court for a jury trial on the afternoon of May 26. He was released on $1,000 bail.

Van Ryzin charges police entered his home without first securing a search warrant.

YOUNGSTERS WARNED TO AVOID HASTY MARRIAGES

Soler second thought and the consent of parents before entering matrimony were the keynote of the address given by Rev. Dr. Mount Olive Evangelical Lutheran church when marriage was discussed from many angles at the monthly educational and social meeting of Olive Branch society in the church Friday evening.

Four speakers who led the discussion were John Dietrick, William Mueller, Louis Freude and Earl Kramer. An open forum on the subject then was conducted. Hasty marriages or those of tender years were warned against, and suggestions given for making a wedded life happy. Christian character was named as an essential to a successful married life.

About 50 young people attended the gathering and many took part in the discussion. A social hour followed, at which games were played.

OPEN GATES SOON IF RIVER LEVEL KEEPS ON FALLING

Oshkosh Officials Convinced That Government Works Are in Danger

If the water continues to recede the next few days as rapidly as it has since Wednesday or Thursday, the gates in the dam at Neenah may be opened gradually late next week. It was learned Saturday morning. The level of the lake and river is slowly dropping, relieving immediate danger but there still exists the menace of heavy rains and high wind.

Oshkosh city officials, who made a tour of inspection of the lower Fox river to determine for themselves if the government works at Kimberly and down river would be endangered by opening of the gates at Neenah, were convinced that the less would be terrific if the gates were opened. They recommended the expenditure of a large sum of money by the government to strengthen its property so that water can be discharged from the lake more rapidly.

George H. Randall, city engineer at Oshkosh, said he was convinced that government engineers were right when they said opening of the Neenah gates during the period of high water would be fraught with great danger. He said the temporary dikes at Kimberly would not withstand a heavy rush of water.

Oshkosh residents have been advising to avoid use of water from wells during the high water period because of the danger of typhoid and other illness. The drainage system has been endangered by highwater pressure, it is said.

BILL TO CONTROL RADIO IS READY

parties at interest together but the division of time must be made by the transmitting stations or else the government will decline to interfere. But the advantages of dividing the time so that each station may be free from interference during its sending periods are so obvious that agreement is confidently expected.

STATIONS INCREASED

Secretary Hoover who has been working on the matter for many months believes that the number of sending stations will be materially increased when as many as four or five wave lengths can be used in a city at the same time. Up till now, there have been very few wave lengths available for private use, the navy has reserved for its own use most of the wave length. This has compelled stations in the same vicinity to use the same length with the result that they have drowned each other out or interfered with each other so seriously as to be ineffective. Most of the programs, especially concerts and entertaining features of radio, telephony have had to be sent on the same wave length—360 meters. This has made it impossible, for instance, to hear stations at great distances because the stations nearby took precedence in the air.

The granting of more wave lengths for private use may revolutionize radio. It will then be possible for each city to have as many as ten stations for instance and each station would be able to use every other hour of the day. There were more sending stations, the time could be reduced to periods of a half hour each and so on. Sending stations are rather expensive to build and unless private companies can see a material benefit in establishing them, officials believe the number of transmitting stations will not grow too large for convenience. As for receiving stations they can grow to unlimited numbers because a receiving outfit is simple and cannot be interfering to either with somebody else's sending or receiving apparatus. Expense and the necessity for a power plant of dimensions too large to be installed in private homes will always keep down the number of transmitting stations but everybody expects the number of receivers to grow by tens of thousands as the expense is being gradually reduced to relatively small sums.

Assessor's Meeting

City, village and town assessors similar to the one held in Appleton last Saturday were held in several counties near here this week. John A. Lonsford, assessor of incomes, Outagamie county, spoke at assessors' meetings this week at Manitowish, Wauwagan and Wautoma.

Copyright, 1922, by the Architects Small House Service Bureau, Northwestern Division, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn.

The needs of the small or moderate sized family, where a medium priced home is desired, have been kept in mind at every step in this plan which is practically square and, therefore, the most economical type to build. This home is adaptable to most any setting or section of the country. It is compact in arrangement, no waste space and yet offers a great deal of distinctive character in both external and internal appearance.

The structure of the house is frame with shingle roof. Exterior walls are brick veneer to the top of first window sills. Second story and gables are in stucco and half timber. Wide, white molar joints in a warm face brick give snap to the external design.

The roof line broken by two dormer windows, the decorative half timber treatment in gables and second story, the outside chimney, the side seat before the entrance are features that lend charm to what is really a very simple, almost square house. A roomy open porch is particularly well located under the main roof and to the rear of the living room. The entrance vestibule projects slightly from the house, although cleverly included under the main roof.

Living room features are a brick fireplace, large alcove, glazed double doors leading from living room to porch and outlook on three sides. In the kitchen every provision is made for efficiency, labor and step saving. Bedrooms are provided with cross ventilation and adequate closet space.

In the development of this plan stock materials and standardized equipment are used wherever possible. This results in eliminating waste and, therefore, lowers building costs. This home is adaptable to the average 40-foot city lot. More space, however, would provide a better setting.

THE HOME HOT BLAST FURNACE SOLVES EVERY HEATING PROBLEM

For more than six months of each year we are dependent upon artificial heat to keep our homes comfortable.

Many people are perplexed when it comes to choosing a furnace but they need not be if they will only bear in mind the results they expect to get from a furnace.

The first requirement of a good furnace is that it must adequately heat the building in which it is placed.—Efficiency.

Second, to furnish this heat the furnace should burn as little fuel as possible.—Economy.

Third, it should be so easy to run that any member of the family can tend it.—Simplicity.

Fourth, the furnace should be so well constructed that it will require the least repairs and upkeep.—Durability.

Such a furnace—Efficiency, Economical, Easy to run and Durable—is a good investment.

Have this Furnace installed by The Furnace Men in The Furnace Business.
